Right-to-work, lottery, most GOP candidates lead in poll

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley voters favor the right-to-work and lottery propositions on the Nov. 4 ballot and lean toward Republican candidates in all but one of four top races, a telephone survey conducted by The Times-News last week shows.

The exception is incumbent Democratic congressman Richard Stallings, who outpolled Republican challenger Mel Richardson in the survey of 386 voters selected at random from the Magic Valley phone directory.

Fifty-four percent, or 200 respondents, said they would vote to return Stallings, a Rexburg Democrat, to the U.S. House of Representatives. Richardson, an Idaho Falls broadcaster, drew 103 votes, or 28 percent. Sixty-five respondents, or 18 percent, were undecided.

It was the widest margin of any of the ballot items surveyed.

Initiative 1, asking respondents whether or not they approved of a state lottery, was close behind with 53 percent, or 197, of the respondents saying they would vote in favor of it. There were 109 "no" votes, or 29 percent and 64 respondents, or 17 percent, were undecided.

Referendum 1, giving voters the chance to approve or disapprove the state's new right-to-work law, also drew a substantial endorsement, with 51 percent — or 188 persons — surveyed saying they would vote in favor of it. It was opposed by 123 persons, or 33 percent, with 58 persons (16 percent) undecided.

The telephone survey was conducted Wednesday through Saturday of last week and encompassed the entire, eight-county Magic Valley area. Numbers were chosen at random by a mathematical formula designed to obtain a sample of about 400 respondents. The margin of error in a poll of this size is about 4 percent.

Several contests fell close to or within the margin-of-error factor, meaning they are statistically too close to call.

In a departure from most statewide polls, Leroy led with 171 (47 percent), compared to 137 respondents (38 percent) for Andrus. Fifty-three respondents (15 percent) said they were undecided.

The U.S. Senate race was closer, with Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, garnering 44 percent, or 157 respondents, and Democratic challenger Gov. John Evans polling 143 respondents (40 percent). Fifty-nine respondents (16 percent) said they were undecided.

Republican Butch Otter was favored by 34 percent, or 121 persons, for lieutenant governor over Democratic state Treasurer Marjorie Ruth Moon, with 100 votes (28 percent); 120 respondents (33 percent) were undecided.

An even larger number were undecided on HJR 4, a constitutional amendment to reduce the size of the state Legislature from its present 126 senators and representatives to no more than 105.

Many persons surveyed said they were not familiar with the measure; 44 percent, or 159 persons, said they were undecided. Thirty-three percent, or 120 respondents, favored the idea, while 79 respondents (22 percent) were opposed.

Those persons reached by Times-News surveyors were asked whether or not they were registered voters and whether they planned to vote in the Nov. 4 election. Only those who said they planned to vote were then surveyed.

No questions were asked about party affiliation, but several persons unfamiliar with the candidates said they planned to vote straight-party tickets.

Gorbachev accuses U.S. of wanting to 'bleed' Russia with Star Wars

By KEN OLSEN
The Associated Press

MOSCOW — Mikhail S. Gorbachev said Tuesday the United States lacks the political will to reach arms control agreements and wants to "bleed the Soviet Union white economically" with an expensive arms race in space.

The 65-minute address, televised to the nation, was the Soviet leader's first assessment since returning home of the weekend summit in Iceland in which he and President Reagan failed to agree on nuclear arms reductions.

Gorbachev said he remained optimistic that the superpowers have not reached the end of the road in their efforts to agree on arms control, but indicated the next step is up to the Americans.

He portrayed himself as "the one who repeatedly took the initiative and made concessions at the summit, suggesting that Reagan was intransigent and ill-prepared.

The Americans "lacked the breadth of approach, understanding of the unique character of the moment and, ultimately, courage, responsibility and political determination that are so necessary for resolving vital and complicated world problems," Gorbachev said. "They stuck to their old time-eroded positions that contradicted present-day realities."

He said the meeting was useful, but foundered on Reagan's refusal to give up "Star Wars," the space-based missile defense system formally named the Strategic Defense Initiative.

"After Reykjavik it is clearer than ever for everyone that SDI is the symbol of obstruction to the cause of peace, the epitome of military schemes, of the unwillingness to remove the nuclear menace looming over mankind," Gorbachev said. "There can be no other interpretation."

The Reykjavik summit "prepared a possible step forward for a real shift for the better, provided the United States at long last adopts a realistic position and abandons its illusions in assessments," he said.

He also indicated the Kremlin is prepared to wait for Reagan to change his mind on Star Wars, or a new administration in Washington.

"We have considerable experience in dealing with the United States," Gorbachev said. "We know how changeable, how fickle the domestic political weather there can be."

The Communist Party chief described in detail what he portrayed as his efforts throughout the meetings in Iceland to persuade Reagan to agree to what he called "major measures which, if they had been accepted, would have ushered in a new epoch in the history of humanity, a nuclear-free epoch."

However, he said, "The leadership of (the United States) is too much dependent on the military-industrial complex, on monopoly groups. They turn the arms race into a business, into a means of getting profits."

He accused the United States of making "two grave errors" in its approach to the Soviet Union.

The first is tactical, he said, an apparent belief that the Soviet Union will "sooner or later agree to the revival of the American strategic diktat, and will accept limiting only Soviet arms."

Reagan tells Soviets to grab chance to continue talking toward arms deal

By TERENCE HUNT
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev blamed each other Tuesday for their inability to strike an arms reduction deal in Iceland, but agreed that too much is at stake to fold the negotiating table.

Recalling his description of Iceland as a base camp leading to a summit, Reagan said: "I believe there exists the opportunity to plant a permanent flag of peace at that summit, and I call on the Soviets not to miss this opportunity."

Gorbachev, in a nationally broadcast address to the Soviet people, accused Reagan of trying to push his country into an expensive new arms buildup. But Gorbachev also said that negotiations cannot be abandoned. He did say, however, the next move is up to the United States.

The intercontinental verbal crossfire came two days after the pair, in a bittersweet climax to a weekend of intensive talks, grimly bade one another farewell in the darkness outside a white clapboard house in Reykjavik.

"The American people don't mistake the absence of a final agreement for the absence of progress. We made progress. We must be patient. We made historic advances. We will not turn back," Reagan said in a speech.

Reagan said the Kremlin overplayed its hand in seeking to get him to scrap "Star Wars," the system known formally as Strategic Defense Initiative, which the president says is vital to America's defense.

The Americans "put good, fair ideas on the table, and they won't go away," Reagan said, but he also said the Soviet Union "has long been engaged in extensive" efforts to devise its own strategic defense system.

Reagan said the Soviet proposal to confine Star Wars research to the laboratory "would have given them an immediate one-sided advantage, and a dangerous one."

At the Pentagon, a top U.S. arms control strategist said the Soviet Union may well have wished to protect some of its own breakthroughs in Star Wars-type research when it demanded that the United States give up non-laboratory testing of America's space-based missile shield concept.

Richard N. Perle, assistant defense secretary for international security policy and a member of Reagan's negotiating team in Reykjavik, also suggested that the Soviets advanced their unacceptable demands to limit "Star Wars" research in hopes of stopping all U.S. research in space, including work on new communication systems and sensors.

Earlier, Reagan, briefing members of Congress on the superpower arms discussions, said, "Don't think this is the end of the book." He won bipartisan support for efforts to

In other matters Tuesday, the court:

Nuclear bomb model keeps campus on edge

The Associated Press

BOULDER, Colo. — The model of a nuclear bomb created by physics major Frank Sanders is not a real weapon, but word that he had it in his dormitory room made some University of Colorado officials uneasy.

"Cripes," Gerald D. Ferguson, the university's assistant director of student housing, said Monday. "He could blow us all away. I would say, even without knowing anything about it, he's on thin ice as far as being legal. I'll check into it right away."

Sanders, a 25-year-old senior, recently shocked fellow students and his professor by unveiling the 240-pound bomb during a presentation for a course called Physics of the Nuclear Arms Race.

But he said he has neither the plutonium, uranium nor the "more accessible elements" such as radium that would be necessary for detonation.

Sanders said the device, a contraption of pipes and steel that sits in a corner of the student's room in Willard Hall, would produce the equivalent of more than 4 kilotons of TNT — if it were loaded with plutonium or uranium 235. That easily could level Denver, he said.

Sanders, who built the project last summer in his Arvada home, said he wanted to show how easily a fission bomb could be assembled. Most of his information came from the Los Alamos Primer, a publication designed for scientists arriving in New Mexico for the Manhattan Project in World War II. The book was declassified by the U.S. government in the 1960s.

But physics Professor Robert A. Ristinen said the project is a model, not a weapon. It was "good fun and all of that, but to say that it's bomb or 'ill but a bomb' is irresponsible," Ristinen said.

Peace prize to champion of dignity

The Associated Press

OSLO, Norway — Elie Wiesel, who survived the Nazi Holocaust to become the voice of its victims and a champion of dignity for all people, was chosen Tuesday to receive the 1986 Nobel Peace Prize.

The Norwegian Nobel Committee praised the naturalized American author as a spiritual leader in an age of violence and hatred.

"Wiesel's commitment, which originated in the sufferings of the Jewish people, has been widened to embrace all repressed peoples and races," its citation said.

Jo Benkow, president of Parliament, said: "Never has his message — the fight against growing terrorism and contempt for human beings — been more timely." Benkow is one of several Scandinavian legislators who nominated the 58-

The second mistake is strategic, he said: "The United States would like to bleed the Soviet Union white economically through the arms race, an arms race in the most expensive, the most advanced space weapons.

"The United States would like to create all sorts of difficulties for the Soviet leadership, torpedo its plans, including its plans in the social sphere, in the sphere of improving the living conditions of our people and thereby to arouse the discontent of the people with their leadership."

He dismissed what he called a Western illusion that "the Soviet Union will not ... withstand the arms race economically, will break down, and will come to the West cap in hand."

"We will always be able to stand up for ourselves," Gorbachev said. "The Soviet Union has a response to any challenge, if necessary. The Soviet people know this and it should be known all over the world. We have no wish to engage in power politics."

Gorbachev made predictions about when he and Reagan would meet again. They agreed at their first meeting in Geneva last November to hold subsequent summits in the United States and Soviet Union.

Reagan, greeted by standing applause from the lawmakers in the Cabinet Room, accused Gorbachev of derailing the talks by insisting that all agreements "will be held hostage to a non-negotiable demand that the United States foreswear once and for all our right to develop a strategic defense" against missiles.

Seeking to avoid blame for the summit impasse on reducing nuclear weapons arsenals, the administration began an extraordinary campaign to get its version of events across, holding the Soviets responsible for the summit's disappointing outcome.

Reagan conducted an interview with newspaper columnists and television anchormen, while Secretary of State George Shultz and White House chief of staff Donald Regan made appearances on morning television shows, and Shultz scheduled a news briefing late in the afternoon.

In the interview, the president was optimistic the Soviets want to resume bargaining. "They may try to see if they can make us back off our proposals, and I am convinced that they'll come back to the table and talk," he said.

Discussing Gorbachev, Reagan said, "I'm not saying to you he's an easy mark in any way. He's totally dedicated to their system, and frankly, I think he is — I think he believes sincerely their propaganda about us — that we're beholden to industrial and military complexes and so forth."

Asked about Gorbachev's charge that the United States cause the Soviets to make huge defense expenditures, Secretary of State George Shultz told a news briefing that both countries have indicated they want the elimination of large categories of nuclear weapons.

That, Shultz said, "doesn't sound like trying to bleed them dry."

He added that Gorbachev had made several points with which the Reagan administration agrees.

Shultz quoted Gorbachev as saying the summit prepared the possibility for a step forward. "Certainly, that's true," Shultz said.

He said that to the extent that these and other comments by Gorbachev signal a positive assessment of the Iceland summit, "that is our view."

In a departure from standard practice, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said that all comments by administration officials on the summit would be on the record, rather than attributable only to unidentified senior administration officials. In matters of international affairs and security, the White House frequently insists that officials not be identified by name.

Congress clears roadblocks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Under the fourth threat of a government shutdown this month, Congress on Tuesday settled defense policy disputes that had been a major hurdle blocking passage of the year's major money bills.

A House-Senate conference committee reached agreement late Tuesday on a defense authorization bill. It was good news for lawmakers itching to adjourn and hit the campaign trail.

The conferees agreed on a $291.8 billion total for the Department of Defense and military programs under other agencies. President Reagan had originally requested $320 billion.

Anti-nuclear activists arrested

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — U.S. officials announced plans Tuesday for a major nuclear weapons test, shortly after six anti-nuclear activists reportedly entered the sprawling Nevada Test Site in an effort to halt the blast.

Department of Energy spokesman Jim Boyer announced Thursday's test shortly after Steve Rohl, a spokesman for the Boulder, Colo.-based Rocky Mountain Peace Center, said the six activists were headed for ground zero.

Tests are listed as having an explosive force of less than 20 kilotons or 20 to 150 kilotons, and Boyer said Thursday's test, code-named Belmont, would be in the larger range.

Major airlines increase fares

NEW YORK (AP) — Tired of losing money from deep discounts, three of the biggest U.S. airlines raised one-way prices as much as $30 Tuesday, the second fare increase announced this month and the first systemwide in a year.

Travel agents and analysts welcomed the news from United Airlines, American Airlines and Delta Air Lines, calling it a powerful signal that a protracted fare war was largely ended. They also said fares still remain relatively low and that most travelers would barely notice the higher cost.

The fare hikes are effective on tickets bought Oct. 26 or thereafter, the airlines said.

Shop explosion kills 2 men

CLEBURNE, Texas (AP) — The head of a munitions plant and an employee were killed in an explosion in a workshop Tuesday as the executive worked on a "pet project" involving black powder, a company official said.

Officials at the Gearhardt-Owens Explosives plant, which has a history of fatal accidents, were unable to pinpoint the cause of the blast about 5 p.m. in a 50- by 30-foot frame structure.

One of those killed was David Levey, the company president, who was working in the shop, said Phillip Lawson, vice president of explosives manufacturing.

Car bomb set off near barracks

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — A car bomb exploded in front of a police barracks in downtown Barcelona Tuesday night, killing one policeman and wounding two others and 15 civilians, the governor's office reported.

Police Chief Augustin Linares blamed the Basque separatist group ETA for the bombing. ETA, which stands for Basque Homeland and Liberty in the Basque language, has claimed responsibility for bombings and gunfire attacks that have killed 37 people this year, including 12 policemen who died in a July 14 car-bomb blast in Madrid.

Contra rebels carry out ambush

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Contra rebels ambushed a passenger bus in eastern Nicaragua on Tuesday, killing two people and injuring 15 others, the government radio station reported.

The Voice of Nicaragua also said two passengers were kidnapped in the Tuesday morning attack at Rancho Alegre, a village 133 miles east of the capital on the Managua-Rama highway.

Several of the more seriously injured were taken to a hospital in Managua for treatment, the radio said.

The broadcast said the attack was carried out by U.S.-backed Contra rebels, who have been fighting for four years to overthrow Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

The radio gave no other details.

In the abortion case, the Illinois law required that unmarried girls under 18 and still dependent on their parents notify the parents 24 hours before they abort their pregnancy.

The notification requirement may be waived altogether if the girl proves to a state judge she is mature enough and well-informed enough to make the decision on her own and that notifying her parents would not be in her best interest.

In 1981, the Supreme Court allowed states to impose parental-notification requirements for "immature" girls under 18 who still are dependent on their parents. But in 1983 the court struck down an abortion law's 24-hour waiting period that was applied to minors and adults alike.

Doctors who perform abortions challenged the 1983 Illinois law, seeking to have it declared unconstitutional.

A federal trial judge struck down the entire law, but the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals did not go quite that far.

The appeals court ruled that the 24-hour waiting period was an impermissible infringement on the right to have an abortion. But it left to the state Supreme Court the issue of whether the 1983 law sufficiently provided for confidentiality and anonymity.

In seeking help from the nation's highest court, Illinois officials said the waiting period was "designed to provide an opportunity for meaningful consultation."

They said Arizona, Idaho, Minnesota and West Virginia laws require similar waiting periods between parental notification and abortions.

The court last June reaffirmed its landmark decision legalizing abortion as it struck down, by a 5-4 vote, various abortion regulations imposed by Pennsylvania.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, who announced his retirement six days after that decision, voted with the minority to uphold the state regulations.

Synopsis:

The National Weather Service in Boise says Idaho's weather continued to be dominated by a ridge of high pressure aloft over the Western states.

The movement of this system is slowly eastward. The ridge will be over Idaho today, then moving out onto the plains by Thursday. The result will be a mild, dry weather for the next several days.

Overnight lows Monday night were not as cold as the previous night, but still chilly.

Several places in the central mountains and north central prairies reported lows in the teens. The state's coldest temperature was 15 degrees at Elk City and Stanley. Other lows were in the 20s and low 30s. The high in the state Tuesday was 74 degrees at Hagerman.

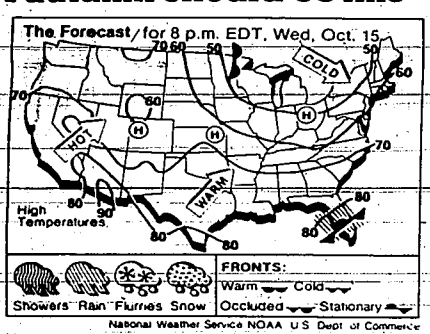

Some middle and high clouds were present in southern and eastern Idaho Tuesday. They were the consequence of a weak disturbance moving through the ridge. Central and northern Idaho remained mostly clear.

By midafternoon, temperatures warmed to the upper 50s in the higher elevations and the 60s in the lower valleys. Winds were mostly under 10 mph, except for a few stations in southeastern Idaho reporting between 10 and 15 mph.

The extended outlook for southern Idaho, Friday through Sunday, calls for a chance of showers in the western portion Friday and eastern portion Saturday, otherwise dry. Temperatures near normal with highs from the upper 50s to mid 60s. Lows in the 30s.

Elsewhere in the nation, Tuesday's high temperature was 94 degrees at Ocala, Fla., and the low was 12 degrees at Battle Mountain, Nev.

Wiesel lost his parents and younger sister in Nazi death camps during World War II. He has chronicled the suffering of the Jews under Hitler and their problems in the Soviet Union today.

"I have devoted my life to a certain cause, the cause of memory, the cause of remembrance, and now I feel that maybe I will have a better opportunity to say the same words — I'm not going to change now — for more people," Wiesel said in New York, where he lives.

"I owe something to the dead. That was their obsession, to be remembered. Anyone who does not remember betrays them again."

The committee's citation said: "Elie Wiesel has emerged as one of the most important spiritual leaders and guides in an age when violence, repression and racism continue to characterize the world."

"Wiesel is a messenger to mankind; his message is one of peace, atonement and human dignity. His belief that the forces fighting evil in the world can be victorious is a hard-won belief."

In 1944, Wiesel was among 15,000 Jews deported by Germans and Hungarian fascists from his native town of Sighet in what is now Romania. It was one of the last great deportations in Hitler's extermination of an estimated 6 million Jews.

"Until the mid-50s, I refused to talk. I was scared to talk. I kept totally silent," he said at a 1984 memorial service in Sighet. "Then I said that we survivors have the duty to talk, and thus writing has become an obsession. But I'm afraid I don't say everything that should be told."

Kindergarten, nursery school enrollment hits record levels

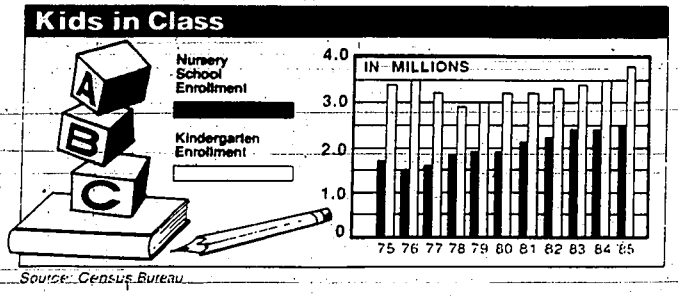

WASHINGTON (AP) — Enrollment in kindergarten and nursery schools is at record levels as births edge upward, a trend that Census Bureau officials say will shortly reverse the long-term decline in elementary school enrollment.

"In 1985 there were more children attending pre-primary school than ever before," including 2.5 million tots in nursery school and 3.8 million in kindergarten, the Census Bureau reported Tuesday.

"Parents are enrolling their children at earlier ages for the educational benefits," explained statistician Rosalind Bruno of the Census Bureau.

"Some people keep dismissing it as day care, but it isn't. The increase occurs among children of non-working mothers as much or more than among those of working mothers. And most nursery school is part-day, and that's not day care," added Ms. Bruno, author of the study.

"The increase in kindergarten and nursery school enrollment in the 1980s because of increased population indicates an imminent reversal of the long-term trend of decline in elementary school enrollment," she wrote in the Bureau's annual report on school enrollment.

Enrollment in pre-schools has grown significantly since 1965, even in the face of the so-called Baby Bust, when birth rates declined sharply.

The low number of births in the 1960s and 1970s was balanced by a rapidly increasing share of children who were sent to nursery school and kindergarten.

And since 1980 an increase in the number of births has added to that trend, helping boost enrollment to the current record levels.

Thus, local systems which closed schools in the face of declining enrollments could be faced with a shortage of teachers and classrooms in the next few years, as children in kindergarten and nursery schools move into the regular classes.

However, Ms. Bruno noted that while an increase in elementary school enrollment will likely occur, "it won't necessarily be in the same places as the schools were in the past. The neighborhoods, areas, even cities (with growing school populations) may change, it depends on migration."

The increase in births in recent years is not another Baby Boom, statisticians stress, since the birth rate has not increased. Instead, it is what they call an echo of the Baby Boom of the 1950s and 1960s, the result of all those children now moving into their own prime childbearing years.

The baby boomers can produce large numbers of offspring even at low birth rates simply because there are so many of them.

For example, last year there were a record 3,749,000 babies born in the United States, and in 1984 the number was 3,697,000, according to the National Center for Health Statistics. The fertility rate of 15.7 births per 1,000 people was the same for both years and well below the levels of the 1950s.

And, the Statistics Center added, the total number of women in the childbearing ages is expected to continue increasing until at least 1990 — although most of the growth will be in the age group of 25 and over.

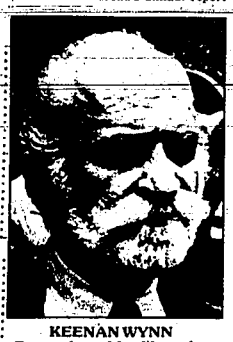

The question of whether the total number of births will continue to rise, thus, depends on whether women who postponed marriage and family to complete their educations and begin careers decide to have children in their late 20s 30s, as many have begun doing in recent years.

The new Census study reports that kindergarten enrollment for 1985 showed a sharp jump, rising from 3.5 million in 1984 to 3.8 million. And "from 1980 to 1985, enrollment grew by one-half million students, or 17 percent, largely because the number of 5-year-olds grew," the report said.

As of last year some 94 percent of 5-year-olds attended kindergarten, up from 93 percent in 1980. The rate was 80 percent in 1970 and 71 percent in 1965, the report said.

The addition of Mississippi this year made the program available to students in every state. Kindergarten is voluntary in most states, but is required for admission to first grade in Delaware, Florida and Kentucky, the Census Bureau reports.

While kindergarten enrollment jumped from 1984 to 1985, nursery school enrollment changed little, rising from 2.4 million to 2.5 million. That's up 25 percent from 2.0 million in 1980, though, and five times higher than in 1965.

KEENAN WYNN
Remembered for film roles

Keenan Wynn dies of cancer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Keenan Wynn, the mustachioed character actor best remembered for film roles in such classics as "Dr. Strangelove" and "Kiss Me Kate," died of cancer Tuesday. He was 70.

Wynn, the son of the late comedian Ed Wynn and the father of screenwriter Tracy Keenan Wynn, died at his Brentwood home, said Roger Armstrong, his son-in-law.

He appeared in more than 200 movies and 250 television shows.

Wynn's most recent role was that of the seat-of-the-pants flier whose son flew U-2 missions in the early 1960s in the canceled ABC-TV series "Call to Glory." A movie in which Wynn acted, "Hyper Sapien," will be released later this year, Armstrong said.

His roles included a hard-nosed paratrooper colonel who blasted apart a Coca-Cola vending machine in "Dr. Strangelove," a gangster with Lee Marvin in the movie "Point Blank," and the fight handler for Jack Palance in the television production of "Requiem for a Heavyweight."

But he was most proud of the role his family played in more than 100 years of entertainment in America.

"My grandfather, Frank Keenan, made his debut on May 7, 1876, as a spear-carrier at the Tremont Street Opera House in Boston. My mother, Hilda Keenan, married Ed Wynn, who made his debut in 1902. I started acting in 1935, and my son Tracy began as a writer in about 1967," Wynn said in a 1976 interview.

Wynn, who started out as a comic like his father, then turned to dramatic acting, said he relished the supporting roles.

"I have always been the 'second man,'" he said. "My billing is always 'with' 'and' or 'also.' That's always been OK with me. Let the stars take the blame."

Wynn was deaf in both ears in the later years of his life and he attributed it to having been exposed to loud noises from the cars, motorcycles and speedboats he raced as a youth.

Harvard doctors urge experimental drug be made available for patients

BOSTON (AP) — Harvard Medical School professors said Tuesday that their patients and thousands of others are suffering renewed blindness and facial spasms because lack of liability insurance has shelved an experimental drug.

"To have the drug unavailable is a tragedy," said Dr. Gary E. Borodic of the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary. Many patients have been traveling to Canada and London, where the drug still is sold, he said.

"These patients are so desperate they will go to virtually any lengths to get the problem cured," said Dr. Daniel Townsend, a colleague, who held a news conference with Borodic and three of their 130 patients to publicize the issue.

The patients suffer from a rare neurological disorder, blepharospasm, that causes involuntary muscle spasms. The affliction can force eyes shut, contort faces and render victims speechless.

The cause of the disorder is unclear, but a drug created from the botulism toxin is the only medication that can give relief to most of the estimated 50,000 patients afflicted in the United States, Townsend said.

The medication's maker, San Francisco ophthalmologist Alan B. Scott, stopped distributing the drug last spring to 250 doctors who were using it in clinical trials.

Scott, associate director of the Smith-Kettlewell Eye Research Foundation, told the doctors he could not find liability insurance while awaiting final approval from the federal Food and Drug Administration for the treatment.

"I can't use my eyes at all," said one patient, Mary M. Sousa, 76, of Somerville, as her eyes blinked and watered. "By evening I can do nothing but go to bed with a scarf over my head to cover my eyes. It's miserable."

She said she was willing to assume all liability if she was allowed to continue the treatment.

"The application is sitting on somebody's desk while a great many people are suffering intolerably," said Dr. Thomas Crowe, 73, a Northampton radiologist who retired 10 years ago when his involuntary blinking made him unable to work. He is one of 2,000 patients who have written appeals to the FDA and Congress to speed approval of the drug.

In a form letter to patients, the FDA said it sympathized with them and was willing to continue working with Scott regarding distribution.

And FDA Deputy Commissioner John Norris on Tuesday reiterated that willingness.

Bill passed to honor Korean War vets

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House passed a bill Tuesday authorizing a memorial to Americans who served in Korea and provided $1 million for the effort despite objections from one of the measure's floor managers.

The Korean veterans memorial bill, passed by voice vote, was amended and passed last week by the Senate. It now goes to the White House for President Reagan's signature.

The bill authorizes the American Battle Monuments Commission to establish a memorial on federal land in or near Washington to honor military personnel who served in the Korean conflict, particularly those who were wounded, killed or taken prisoner.

Court says no to appeal

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Attorneys for serial killer Ted Bundy said Tuesday he still has several avenues of appeal remaining after the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear his appeal of his death sentence for slaying a schoolgirl.

Arguments are scheduled Oct. 23 before the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta on Bundy's appeal in a separate pair of slayings, said attorney James Coleman of Washington.

He said there also was a possibility of another state clemency hearing, although an aide to the governor said that was not likely.

The Supreme Court refused Tuesday to hear on direct appeal defense arguments that Bundy's conviction for the Feb. 9, 1978, murder of 12-year-old Kimberly Diane Leach in Lake City was tainted by the testimony of an eyewitness who underwent hypnosis to improve his memory.

Lower courts ruled that use of the testimony amounted to harmless error.

Air merger approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas Air Corp. on Tuesday received tentative approval from the Transportation Department to buy People Express, but it was unclear whether the discount airline would get quick cash to pay its bills.

The department announced it was prepared to approve the merger but would hold off final action for seven days to allow comment in greater detail on possible competitive problems that might be raised.

The department said the merger "is not likely to substantially reduce competition." However, it cited continuing concerns with the transaction's effects on competition between Newark N.J., and Washington's National Airport and in flights in and out of Denver.

Artificial heart patient dies

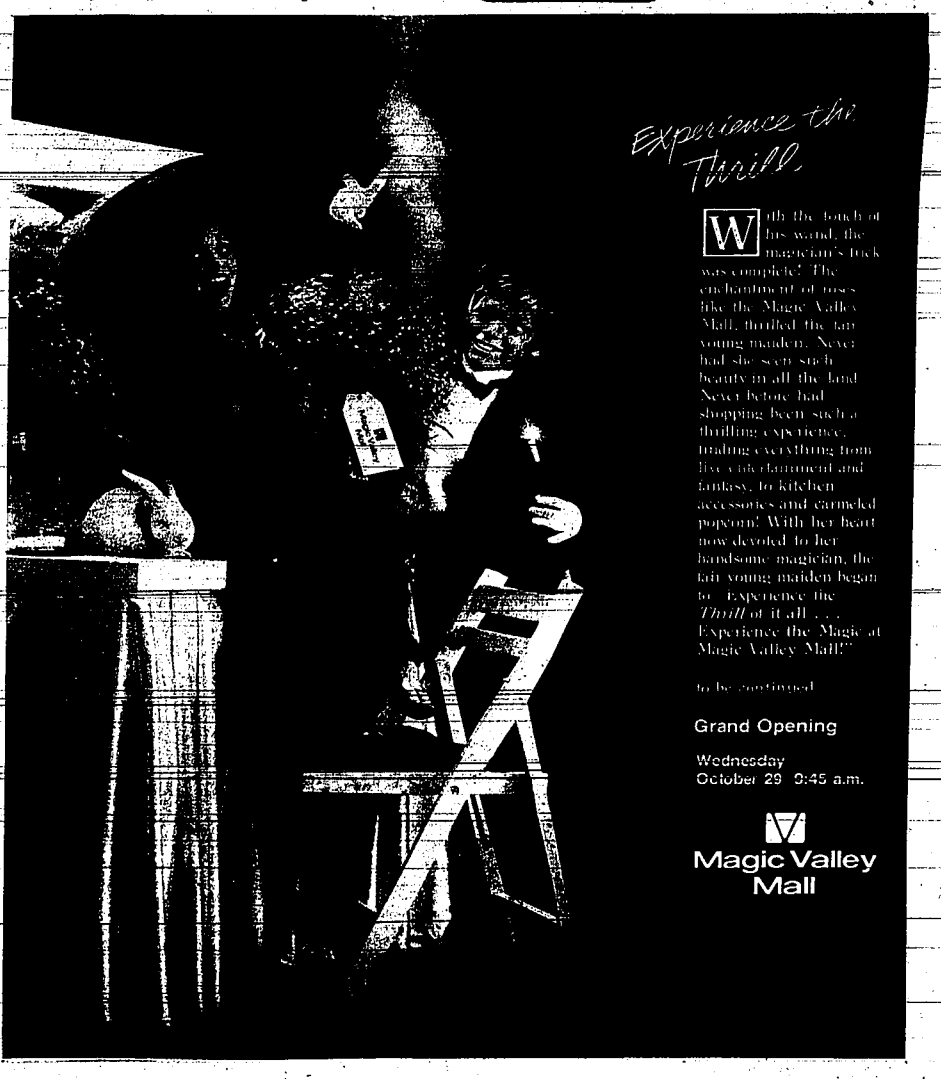

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Mary Lund, the first woman to receive an artificial heart and who later received a human heart transplant, died Tuesday, according to a spokeswoman for Abbott Northwestern Hospital. Mrs. Lund was 40.

Mrs. Lund died at 6:20 p.m., according to spokeswoman Megan O'Hara, after lapsing in and out of a coma for the past several days.

The rural Kensington, Minn., woman lived nearly nine months with the heart of a Montana teenager. In the following months, she underwent kidney dialysis, pancreatic surgery and countless tests.

Mrs. Lund, a nursing home secretary and mother of a 14-year-old boy, became ill with a virus infection in cember. Until then, she had been in good health with no history of heart trouble.

Doctors at Abbott-Northwestern Hospital said it appeared the virus was destroying her heart and she did not have long to live. On Dec. 18, in a six-hour operation, doctors implanted a Jarvik 70 artificial pump, a scaled-down version of the Jarvik 7.

Now to press hunt for common ground

Given the checkered history of negotiations with the Soviet Union since World War II, President Ronald Reagan has taken a courageous, if risky, approach in turning down the Soviet's latest offer to protect his favorite project, the Strategic Defense Initiative.

He has given up the obvious immediate acclaim which would result from an agreement to, as the Soviets put it, ban nuclear weapons from the Earth by the end of the century.

But the history of American-Soviet relations on this subject over the past 40 years shows that such an agreement would likely be honored mostly one side and not by theirs. Indeed, from Potsdam and Yalta down to the present, the Soviets have demonstrated a predisposition to say one thing and then do another.

Yes, Gorbachev may represent a change in this pattern. He is a vigorous new leader, seemingly intent on ending the Soviet's long backwardness in economic development.

To do so, he must direct the nation's resources toward building a whole range needed improvements in agriculture, electricity generation (the cost of Chernobyl is put conservatively at over $1 billion), and many more. If there is anything he does not need, it is another arms race against a technology which is highly expensive and which may well never be built.

Reagan emphasizes that the breakup of the summit is not a failure, but a new beginning, in that the United States is dealing from a position of strength.

In effect, he is saying that the commitment to a strong deterrent defense, which has been American goal, will not be bargained away — ever.

The initial Soviet response has also been moderate, and both sides are now apparently willing to look ahead.

In the talk about "failure," it is easy to overlook what Reagan and Gorbachev accomplished in Iceland. They agreed on much which will make the world a safer place. The Iceland summit has left them closer.

What is needed now is not vituperation, not blame-placing, but a renewed effort by both sides to find common ground.

Cause of arms control not been hurt

Colin S. Gray

The failure to agree at Reykjavik is not a failure for arms control:

What happened at the summit was that the Soviets failed to kill the Strategic Defense Initiative as a serious weapons-development program. The cause of arms control has not been hurt by Reykjavik because the bargain that might have been struck would have been no bargain at all for Western security.

Arms-control negotiations are not a seminar on strategic theory; they are an exercise in competitive leverage. SDI is a source of enormous leverage for the West because it carries the prospect of posing an open-ended threat to the military utility of Soviet missile forces that Moscow knows, or suspects, it will be unable to counter effectively. It makes no sense for Western commentators to analyze the outcome of Reykjavik as though the subject were a technical exercise in negotiation between two essentially similar parties. The backdrop to Reykjavik is a Soviet Union that is politically at war with the West and seeking such military advantage as the domestic politics of the technologically superior democracies permit. A Soviet Union that is inferior to its external foes in all respects save ready military power is not interested in a military relationship of rough parity, whatever its leaders may say for consumption by gullible Westerners.

The Soviets are realists and can be trusted to negotiate and perform under agreements in ways that serve their strategic interests. They will agree to an arms-control regime that advances Western security interests as well as their own only if the alternative — a condition of legally unrestrained competition — promises plausibly to evolve to their disadvantage. As of today, it is plainly not self-evident to Mikhail S. Gorbachev that SDI will surmount all of its domestic U.S. obstacles to fulfillment, which is why failure to agree at Reykjavik was strategically acceptable.

Impatience is a perennial weakness of American political culture. It is a mistake to believe that SDI, a program that is 2½ years old, can produce in the 1980s a negotiated vision of a thoroughly transformed strategic context.

There is no way that Gorbachev is going to abandon his strategic offensive arsenal to fit the new American concept of a defense-dominated strategic world until he knows for certain that the United States will be able to enforce the dominance of defense through a maturing SDI.

The American proposals at Reykjavik, which amounted to provision of a framework for an orderly transition from offense-dominance to defense-dominance, may be negotiable with Moscow one day.

But that negotiability will have to be earned through the achievement of technical progress on strategic defense, and — of course — the steady demonstration of political will to move to deployment of that defense.

In Soviet perspective the U.S. position probably appeared to be an attempt to enlist Moscow's political assistance for SDI. Since the Soviets are likely to face very major, and possibly unsolvable, problems in seeking to find technical or tactical solutions to the SDI, the last thing they are motivated to provide in 1986 is help in the one quarter where SDI is weak — the political.

What was the deal, the allegedly "grand compromise" that President Reagan declined in Reykjavik? Gorbachev offered a large-scale reduction in strategic offensive forces, up to 50 percent, as a major step toward achievement of the goal that he specified last January — total nuclear disarmament.

So far so good, aside from the non-trivial subjects of verification and sustaining the incentive to see such a disarmament design through to completion.

However, Gorbachev also has insisted that the ABM treaty, probably without formal revision, be strengthened in the restraints that it applies upon technology development. Specifically, missile defense technologies would be limited to development and testing in laboratories only.

It is difficult to escape the conclusion that the Soviets suggested the Reykjavik meeting solely in order to wage political warfare against an SDI that already is suffering budgetary attrition from American politicians who do not understand its potential leverage for U.S. security.

Gorbachev's "grand design" of a world without nuclear weapons by the year 2000 is, as he knows, strategically impractical for the West on several grounds (including the implications for security in Europe).

He knows that we know that the Soviet Union systematically, and with careful planning, cheats on agreements. Nuclear disarmament on a radical scale, let alone supposedly down to zero arsenals, must be accompanied by active defenses deployed as insurance against noncompliance.

There is stability of a sort in diversity and large numbers of nuclear weapons. Should those ever be reduced drastically in number, strategic defense deployments would be mandatory.

In practice Gorbachev's Reykjavik offer, if accepted in its essentials, would have had the effect of killing SDI as a weapons program (as contrasted with a program of research in theoretical physics) and of scaline of leverage for arms control worthy of the name in return for what? — a strategic nuclear competition fundamentally unchanged from those that have been obtained over the past several decades.

If the years of our experience with the ABM treaty have taught us anything, it must be that the control of offensive arms cannot be pursued successfully in the absence of missile defenses.

At nightfall Sunday, Reagan was back in Europe's disfavor

Robert E. Hunter

RIMINI, Italy — "The summit failed and it was Star Wars' fault." This is the summary message that has shocked people in Europe, both leaders and lead.

As late as Sunday afternoon, reports from Iceland brought sunny expectations that Ronald Reagan and Mikhail S. Gorbachev would finally put to rest the vexing issue of Euromissiles. By nightfall, the president was back on trial in Western Europe for letting his Strategic Defense Initiative get in the way of a new detente.

As the details come out, the experts may conclude that Gorbachev was not prepared to bargain seriously. Perhaps Reagan the poker player was right to hold out for a better deal before trading away "Star Wars."

But in the age of television, which puts a premium on politics as theater, the president has clearly lost with the European allies.

At Geneva last November, Reagan won hands down in his first meeting with the Soviet leader. The contest was for the hearts and minds of the West Europeans. It turned on a single question: Is it possible to have productive East-West relations while the issue of Star Wars remains unresolved?

When the summit ended cordially, the answer was clearly "yes," and European fears of Star Wars dropped dramatically.

Perhaps Gorbachev saw Reykjavik solely as a chance to turn the tables. He was clearly anxious to use this pre-summit summit as a means to change the agenda for a later meeting in Washington.

Because of the affair over an American journalist held hostage in Moscow, human rights and political relations had eclipsed the Soviet campaign to make the United States look laggard on arms control. Gorbachev needed Reykjavik to get Star Wars back to the center of debate.

The surprise is, therefore, that the U.S. government seems surprised by Soviet tactics. Suddenly, the United States is again on the arms-control defensive. Suddenly, Star Wars is not just one issue among many but — at least in summit psychology — the sole impediment to progress.

At first glance, it is hard to see how Reagan can get back on the path to a summit without first showing willingness to compromise on Star Wars. The political fruits of a Euromissile agreement, waiting to be plucked on both sides of the Atlantic a few days ago, now seem to depend on the president's backing down on his single new strategic idea.

Many Americans, especially on the right, will recall that they warned Reagan against a quicky meeting with Gorbachev. They will mutter about the danger of going unprepared to the summit. But they will miss the point.

Just as there was every reason to expect the Soviet tactic on Star Wars, there was reason to expect Reagan to be ready to deal on all key issues.

The political and psychological weakness of the current U.S. position might not matter so much if there were widespread understanding that the Strategic Defense Initiative is critical to American security. But the opposite is the case.

No U.S. strategic departure in the postwar era has produced such a wide margin of critics over supporters. Nor is skepticism about Star Wars a particularly partisan stance. Republicans prepared to support the Strategic Defense Initiative on its merits are almost as rare as Democrats.

Reagan's proposal has always suffered from confusion about what it is. For the president, it began as an effort to make the United States impermeable to missile attack, to make nuclear weapons "impotent and obsolete."

No serious strategist is prepared to argue this case, and Reagan's rationale is passed over in embarrassed silence even by its supporters.

More worthy arguments were propounded for a form of Star Wars basically designed to protect U.S. missile silos against attack. The reasoning was respectable, although critics saw other means to gain the same result; one such means would be simply to reduce the Soviet threat.

Perhaps Gorbachev's proposals to cut offensive nuclear weapons — thereby embracing Reagan's arms-control approach — do not specifically deal with the threat to U.S. silos. But what the Soviet leader has so far offered calls for negotiating that point, not for persevering with Star Wars.

At a time when the U.S. president has been rebuffed by the Soviet leader, there are strong pressures, both political and patriotic, to rally around the nation's leader. Yet many Americans see strategic merit, for U.S. security, in the Soviet proposal to constrain all but research into the Strategic Defense Initiative. Thus the president is on poor ground to ask for support. On a matter of such gravity — for budgets as well as for the nuclear balance — it will be hard to argue that a bad idea becomes good just because the Soviets oppose it.

Of course, the outcome at Reykjavik may prove to be merely one more testing of mettle before the real bargaining begins. Both sides did characterize the breakdown more in sorrow than in anger. The diplomats at work off-stage may overcome differences and put a summit and arms control back on track.

But with such intense focus on the role that Star Wars played in the drama at Iceland — and with renewed fears that Reagan sees the space-based missile defense program as a cherished goal and not as a bargaining chip — Gorbachev has the edge.

In Western Europe, governments that stake their future on steadfast relations with the United States have taken a blow. In Britain and West Germany, where governments are beset by opposition parties that are intensely anti-nuclear, standing firm with the American President on Star Wars research suddenly seems like a fool's bargain. Thus the United States is at a serious disadvantage, both in bargaining with the Soviets and in reassuring anxious allies. The wisdom of American leadership is being called to account.

Bernard Lown, Conn Nugent

The news from Reykjavik was good.

Amid all the talk of collapse and failure, keep in mind that the leaders of the two nations capable of extinguishing life on this planet were on the verge of an agreement that would have precluded that capability.

Yes, there remains one massive disagreement — on space weapons — that puts the whole package on hold.

But only one. We ought to be grateful that the area of discord can be so tightly focused.

We'll learn precise details in the next few days. But it appears that the following agreements would have been made were it not for the "Star Wars" issue:

- Reduction of one half of all long-range nuclear systems in five years; complete elimination of these systems in 10 years. This would mean the dismantling of 20,000 warheads with the explosive power of about 800,000 Hiroshima bombs.
- Immediate elimination of all but 100 medium-range missiles on each side, a reduction of over 85 percent.
- Limits on nuclear testing and new negotiations on a comprehensive test ban treaty.

Commentators friendly to President Reagan have said that these steps represent enormous concessions by the Soviets. And they do. We can attest to that.

American and European physicians have worked with Soviet colleagues for five years now in alerting the people and government of the Soviet Union to some central truths: that a nuclear war would be unsurvivable, and that the national security interest of the Soviet Union cannot be gained at the expense of the security of the United States.

The changes, among both leaders and ordinary citizens, have been remarkable to observe. Cynics may scoff at Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's embrace of Einstein's call for "a new way of thinking in the Nuclear Age." But the breadth and depth of the near-miss measures at Reykjavik indicate that Soviets — and Americans too — are awake to the fact that concessions serve self-interest. Nuclear war is an accident waiting to happen. The search for advantage is illusory.

So the issue is clearly drawn. Two self-declared abolitionists who say they are ready to agree on a mutual path to a shared goal part company on a single question.

One says that abolition requires that space be demilitarized and ballistic defense confined to laboratory research.

The other says that before there can be abolition, there must be a decade of research, development and full-scale testing in order to come up with a vast array of space weapons, which he says would be limited solely to defense.

Since it is our president who seeks the innovation, the responsibility falls on all Americans to decide whether he has met the burden of proof.

We should conduct a great national debate — not only in Congress but in our schools and at our town meetings. Just what is the Strategic Defense Initiative? What can it be expected to do? What intercepts might it protect and whose might it threaten? What will it really cost?

And, in the end, we must answer the final questions: What is the best way to protect our people from Soviet missiles? By drastically reducing the number of those missiles or by trying to shoot down far larger numbers from the sky?

Bernard Lown is professor of cardiology at the Harvard School of Public Health and co-president of International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War, winners of the 1985 Nobel Peace Prize. Conn Nugent is the executive director of the organization.

Clarifying language removed to allow printing of ballots

"A yes vote will keep the right-to-work law."

"A no vote will repeal the right-to-work law."

As Idaho Secretary of State, I attempted to place those simple words on Idaho's Referendum #1 ballot to make sure voters are aware, whether they support or oppose Idaho's right-to-work law, exactly how to vote in order to keep the law or to repeal it.

For the record, my intent in wanting you to have the full story — by making it clear what will happen if you vote yes, and what will happen if you vote no — was neither to support nor oppose the right-to-work law itself, but only to ensure your right to know exactly how to vote in order to make that decision for yourself.

Unfortunately, the Idaho AFL-CIO threatened to sue me and the State of Idaho unless I removed that clarifying language from your ballot. I believe their attack on your right to know makes it clear that union officials who oppose the right-to-work law do not want you to have all the facts necessary for a clear, informed choice on Referendum #1.

Despite my strong belief that you should be fully informed on your ballot exactly how you should vote to either keep or repeal the right-to-work law, I nevertheless had no choice but to concede to the AFL-CIO's threat and remove the clarification language from the ballot. Let me explain why.

Even though the courts, in my opinion, would have upheld your right to know, the AFL-CIO lawsuit would in fact have delayed printing of the ballot long enough to deny our military personnel, students and others away from home an opportunity to vote all in the November election. Rather than allow union officials to deny voting rights to thousands of Idahoans abroad and away at school, I had no choice but to remove that simple clarification language from the ballot.

Pete T. Cenarrusa

A legal spokesman for those opposed to the right-to-work law incorrectly claimed that the simple clarification language would have violated a 1954 court decision which said only that using "The Right to Work Initiative Proposal" as the title for the ballot measure that year was not distinctive enough. However, that decision had nothing to do with clarifying the difference between a yes vote and a no vote on Referendum #1 in 1986, since the title on this year's ballot fully meets the Idaho Supreme Court's test of 1954. The law whose status will be determined by Referendum #1 was passed and officially entitled the "Right to Work" law by the Idaho Legislature over a year and a half ago. The term "right-to-work" already appears in the language on the ballot.

Even when I offered to remove that term from the clarification and simply say — "A yes vote will keep the law. A no vote will repeal the law." — the AFL-CIO's attorney still threatened to sue.

I concur with a recent editorial in the Idaho State Journal from Pocatello, which said, "Organized labor's opposition to adding simple clarifying language on a state referendum on Idaho's right-to-work law makes it clear that it doesn't want the public to understand the question."

Sitting by my side at a recent news conference on this matter, Idaho Attorney General Jim Jones said, "The state AFL-CIO appears to be afraid to let the people know the effect of a yes or no vote on the right-to-work referendum."

The only conclusion I can reach is that opponents of Idaho's right-to-work law are purposely waging a campaign designed to confuse you, and my attempt to give you the simple truth posed a threat to their campaign.

Therefore, the AFL-CIO's threat to sue and hold absentee voters hostage, in order to deny you that information, goes beyond an attack on right-to-work. It was a direct attack instead on your right to know and the public interest.

As the November 4th election approaches, I still believe you have the right to know, and I commend this newspaper for allowing me this space to guarantee that right.

Senator commended for farm problem work

I read the recent editorial by Sen. John Peavey on the St. Louis Farmers and Ranchers Congress. I, like Senator Peavey, was an Idaho delegate to the meeting and agree with everything he said not only about the meeting but when he said we must all become more involved in finding solutions to our farming problems.

I was never very active until recently but the more I learn about our farm policies, the more I understand there are ways of making things better. John Peavey has been saying this too and it was nice to see one of our lawmakers not only talk about the farm problem but become part of the group going to the national meeting to pursue solutions.

It was the same way last winter when Senator Peavey sat down with a group of farmers who went to Boise to see if there were any legislative answers to our problems. He helped them come up with farm bills getting their ideas into measures that he sponsored in the State Senate.

There are not many lawmakers like him these days. Most of them talk a good game but John gets out with us and works. And we're lucky to have him on our side.

Promise of pay raise can take from others

Through the marvel of television, I recently witnessed Mr. Andrus promise an organization of public employees a salary increase if he is elected.

With this spoken promise to give something to these people, he also made an unspoken promise to take something away from everyone else in the state of Idaho. It can be no other way.

The public treasury is filled from the pockets of the producing public. This same treasury is emptied by professional politicians who embark on vote buying sprees with a public credit card.

Perhaps Mr. Andrus' promise of pay raises to his government employee friends was not meant for the public, and maybe he was just giving lessons in demagoguery.

L.M. Boyd What's what

People pay more attention to their right field of vision than their left. Usually. When they look at you, therefore, they're likely to observe more carefully the left side of your face. So medical research reveals. Remember that, young lady, when putting on your makeup.

Stand next to an Egyptian pyramid. You're closer to the top — in relation to your size — than a termite is — in relation to its size — to the top of the hill it builds for its home.

In Czarist Russia lived the Skoptzi, a sect of deep believers. They smoked not and neither did they drink. The men, after fathering two children, had themselves castrated, thus to commit themselves thereforward to God. "Too much!" cried the Russians of different view. Or words to that effect. They drove out the Skoptzi, who wound up as Rumanian coach drivers. The Skoptzi all cut their hair like little Dutch boys.

BUSIEST FREEWAY

Q. What's the busiest freeway nationwide?

A. The Dan Ryan Expressway near Chicago. About 250,000 cars a day, average.

Who'd first come to your mind, if you were asked to name a true heroine. As you might expect, "Mom" wound up in first place when University of Wisconsin students were so queried. The runners-up in this curious competition were noteworthy. A wonderful pair: Mother Teresa and Jane Fonda.

REUNION

Ever go to your class reunions? If so, why? Some goers want to compare rates of success, if any. Others just show up to renew old friendships. It's the latter who are said to have achieved that state known as "maturity." The comparers, it's claimed, still have some growing up to do.

Top country honors to Strait, McEntire

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Reba McEntire, who gave up a career as a rodeo rider to become a singer, won entertainer of the year and her third straight top female vocalist honors at the 20th annual Country Music Association awards.

Balladeer George Strait was voted male vocalist of the year Monday night for the second straight year. The Judds, a mother and daughter who have been singing professionally for only three years, were selected best vocal group for the second year in a row.

"I'm very proud to carry the banner for country music," said Ms. McEntire, who sings love ballads like her No. 1 "Whoever's In New England."

In her acceptance speech at the Grand Ole Opry House, Ms. McEntire recalled being told early in her career that women would find achievements difficult.

"Well, y'all just proved 'em wrong," said the former barrel racer who quit the rodeo circuit seven years ago after 10 years of competition.

Strait, 34, a one-time cattle-ranch foreman from San Marcos, Texas, dedicated his bullet-shaped trophy to his daughter, Jennifer, 13, who died in a traffic accident in June.

Dan Seals, who formerly was half of the pop music duo of England Dan and John Ford Coley, joined Ms. McEntire as a double winner.

He won single of the year for his uptempo "Bop" and shared top vocal duo honors with Marie Osmond, who was celebrating her 27th birthday.

He and Ms. Osmond recorded the melodic No. 1 song "Meet Me in Montana" during the past year and plan to team up again.

"We're looking for songs now that touched us like 'Montana' did," he said after the show.

Elected to the Country Music Hall of Fame were humorist Whitey Ford, "the Duke of Paducah," who died earlier this year, and song publisher-record producer Wesley Rose, who called his selection "the greatest thing in my lifetime."

Other winners:

"Lost in the Fifties Tonight," by Ronnie Milsap, album of the year; Randy Travis, the Horizon Award for career development; the Oak Ridge Boys Band, top instrumental group; veteran fiddler Johnny Gimble, instrumentalist of the year; "Who's Gonna Fill Their Shoes," by George Jones, top video; "On the Other Hand," by Paul Overstreet and Don Schlitz, song of the year (awarded to songwriters).

Schlitz won the same award in 1979 for writing the Kenny Rogers' hit, "The Gambler."

"On the Other Hand" was recorded by Travis, a former catfish cook who has been a recording artist for only 1½ years.

Ms. McEntire, whose favorite song is "The Star-Spangled Banner," said she sees a bright future for country music.

"More and more people are opening to country music than there ever has been before . . . (and) my big old boot will be there to kick in a door for each and every one of you," she said.

"I'm not gonna cry; I'm gonna faint," the Stringtown, Okla., performer said as she accepted the award for top entertainer.

Other finalists for entertainer of the year were the Judds, Strait, Willie Nelson and Ricky Skaggs.

Guest of honor to get personal call to party

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The invitations to a private Halloween party have been printed, but guest of honor Harry Houdini will get a personal call when a seance convenes on the 60th anniversary of the magician's death.

A group of Houdini followers, led by a Massachusetts carpet store owner and Houdini expert, has planned a Halloween seance in another attempt to contact the man who spent part of his career debunking mediums.

Invitations have been sent to a list of 150 selected guests, including actor Tony Curtis, who portrayed Houdini in a movie, and a person who witnessed the blow to Houdini's stomach that led to his death.

Other planned participants in the seance include magic historians, magic store owners, the producer of a Public Broadcasting Service special on Houdini, and Marie H. Blood, a Houdini niece.

The seance location, somewhere in Appleton, Houdini's boyhood home, is being kept secret until just days before the event.

"If he comes back, we'd like to be there," said Sidney H. Radner, the Holyoke, Mass. man behind the seance. "And second, if he doesn't come back, Houdini in his own diabolical way is doing more to hurt fake mediums than anyone alive."

Houdini died of peritonitis in Detroit on Oct. 31, 1926. He had suffered an appendicitis after a student punched him in the stomach before Houdini tightened his muscles to absorb the blow.

For 10 years after his death, Houdini's widow, Beatrice, held seances on the anniversary of his death in attempts to contact him. But in 1936 she announced there would be no more.

Houdini himself spent part of his career trying to expose fake mediums.

"Houdini . . . after his mother died, made attempts to reach her and did go to various mediums to bring messages," Radner said in a telephone interview. "As he continued to go to them he began to realize . . . that these people weren't real.

"So he took personal vendetta. Exposing mediums became part of his act."

Radner, 66, who studied with Houdini's brother Hardeen, said he owns the largest collection of Houdini memorabilia in the world. Some of it, including a pair of locked handcuffs Houdini said he would open if he ever returned from the dead, will be at the Halloween seance.

"I want to see Houdini come through so his loved ones can have the privilege of knowing he's still alive," said Ms. Royse.

Mississippi town planning great bear reunion

ONWARD, Miss. (AP) — It's been 84 years since President Teddy Roosevelt refused to kill a captive bear in the Mississippi Delta, and a celebration is planned to commemorate the event that launched America's love affair with the cuddly teddy bear.

"There are a lot of people who care about this history," said Sandra Desmond of Greenville, organizer of the first Bear Hunt Reunion. "I'm thrilled that something like this is finally coming together."

The reunion will celebrate a legendary bear hunt that took place Nov. 14, 1902, on the banks of the Little Sunflower River in the Delta National Forest north of Vicksburg.

Roosevelt's guide, Holt Collier of Greenville, roped a 235-pound black bear for him, but the president refused to shoot a captive animal.

Word of Roosevelt's compassion and sportsmanship spread quickly and, two days later Washington Post cartoonist Clifford Berryman illustrated the event and coined the teddy bear name.

According to legend, a Brooklyn, N.Y., couple began selling teddy bears after seeing the cartoon and the rest is history.

But Mississippi has never officially celebrated its place in teddy bear lore.

Mrs. Desmond, a transplanted Californian, decided to commemorate the event with what she hopes will become an annual trek to the Delta.

Activities during the weekend of Nov. 14-16 will be centered here at the Onward Store, where Mississippi-made teddies are sold and exhibits illustrate the great hunt.

"The store is about two miles south of where President Roosevelt got off a train at the Smede's Plantation, where the hunting party was staying," Mrs. Desmond said.

The weekend will be kicked off with the unveiling of a historical marker, purchased with $900 in donations from businesses and private citizens, she said.

"We also hope to have a re-enactment of the hunt. It will either be very authentic, with costumes, or it will be acted by Boy Scouts ... I just don't know at this point."

Temporary markers will trace the path of the hunt and the Smede Plantation will be open for tours. Mrs. Desmond said she also will stage a teddy bear hunt for children, like an Easter egg hunt.

She said Mississippi author Shelby Foote, whose grandfather Hugar was in the hunting party, plans to attend, but early indications are that members of the Roosevelt family won't make it.

Students request coffee break time

WAVERLY, Neb. (AP) — When a student in a junior high school asks for a pass to go take a coffee break, something unusual must be going on.

That's the way it was Monday as parents got the option of trading places with their junior high sons and daughters. Principal Kevin Peters said parents of about half of the 192 students took part.

The parents completed laboratory assignments and art projects, and their grades were marked on their child's record, Peters said.

"One girl didn't want her mom to come because she was afraid her average would drop," said Erma McGill, secretary at the school.

Feds investigate the truck involved in bridge accident

Officials want to know if truck met hazardous materials laws

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The U.S. Department of Transportation is checking whether a truck involved in a radioactive materials accident east of Burley Sunday met state and federal laws governing shipments of hazardous materials.

Salvage crews pulled the truck out of the Snake River Tuesday and accounted for all of the 20 boxes of radioactive bars in the shipment bound for Hanford, Wash., said Lindy High of the state Department of Health and Welfare.

No measurable levels of radiation were found in the truck, which was taken to a body shop in Twin Falls, she said. No radiation was found in river sediment and water samples either, but they will be checked at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory near Idaho Falls, High said.

The radioactive bars were taken to INEL for repackaging.

The focus of the federal investigation will be on the truck's shipping papers, said Frank York, a DOT highway safety officer.

The papers were lost in the accident, but another set is on the way to Boise from the E.C.K. Miller Truck Line in Ohio, said York.

Among the points investigators will be checking is whether driver Lonnie Dean Miller of Waverly, Ohio, notified the state Division of Environment when he crossed the state line. York said he was required to do so.

Investigators will be looking at whether the truck was carrying more than the permissible amount of curies, which are units of radioactivity, he said.

Other aspects to be checked are whether the truck displayed the correct hazardous-material placards and whether the driver met sleep requirements for the interstate truckers. Driver are required to take breaks after a specified number of hours on the road.

There was no indication alcohol played a role in the accident, which injured Miller and two others and forced the closing of the westbound lanes of Interstate 84 part of the day Sunday and Monday, said Idaho State Police Cpl. F.D. Rice. Another truck and a combine were also involved in the accident. Miller's truck plunged into the river after breaking through a guardrail, Rice said.

The bars were being transported to Hanford after processing in Ohio at a plant which converts raw uranium into a form suitable for manufacturing fuel assemblies. In Washington the bars would be made into assemblies for nuclear reactors, and eventually uranium and plutonium would be extracted from them for use in nuclear weapons, said Karen Wheeless, a spokesman for the Department of Energy.

Idaho Attorney General Jim Jones said Tuesday that the state needs to do more to regulate the transportation of nuclear materials.

Gov. John Evans said that even though the accident didn't involve nuclear waste, it points to the need for more sites outside the Northwest to dispose of such materials.

There have been four accidents in Idaho involving radioactive materials between January 1980 and December 1985, said Idaho State Police Sgt. Robert Lockett. Lockett is a field supervisor in a state program begun in 1984 to check commercial vehicle registration.

In December 1983 a truck carrying slightly enriched uranium flipped off U.S. Highway 12, 50 miles east of Kooskia in North Idaho, according to news reports. The trailer landed upright and was undamaged.

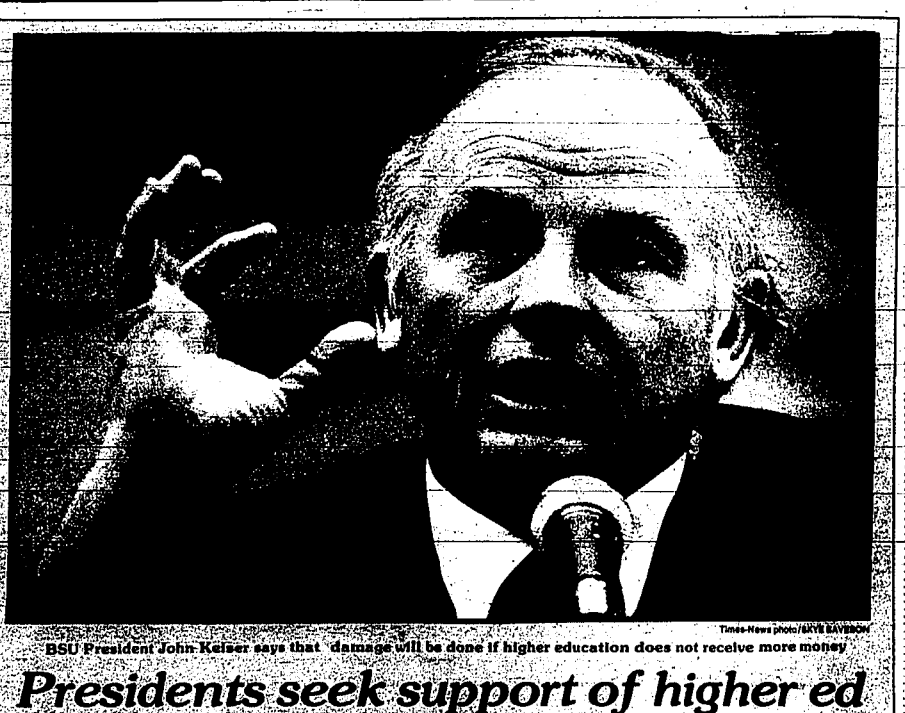

Lockett said he had no idea how many radioactive shipments travel through Idaho, but he said the rule of thumb is that 12 to 15 percent of the trucks are carrying hazardous materials. Nationwide there are 250,000 radioactive shipments daily, he said. "We're getting more and more every day," said Lockett, because of activities at INEL and the Hanford nuclear reservation.

Lockett said that if a long-term repository for the nation's nuclear waste is located in Hanford, another 15 truckloads per day of nuclear waste would pass through the state.

The shipment aboard the truck that crashed Sunday is considered low-level radioactive material, but York said it is still classified as hazardous.

A new state law regulating transportation of hazardous material and waste will go into effect Jan. 1, 1987. The law was passed in response to the increase in hazrdous materials and waste shipments in

BSU President John Keiser says that damage will be done if higher education does not receive more money

Presidents seek support of higher ed

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The presidents of Idaho's four state colleges and universities told a group of legislative candidates Tuesday that economic development efforts will be hampered if funding for higher education is not increased.

Education is more important now than ever before, said Lewis-Clark State College President Lee Vickers, but we've got real problems.

Vickers, along with University of Idaho President Richard Gibb, Boise State University President John Keiser and Idaho State University President Richard Bowen, met with invited guests and area candidates in Twin Falls as part of a statewide tour to drum up support for higher education.

The four painted a bleak picture for the future if the state Legislature fails to appropriate more money.

If this budget is not accepted, higher education has been cut back from 23 percent to 16 percent.

> 'If the economy is going to be rebuilt, it's going to have to be rebuilt by Idahoans who have opportunities to continue in higher education in-state.'
> — John Keiser, BSU President

Keiser said if the economy is going to be rebuilt, it's going to have to be rebuilt by Idahoans who have opportunities to continue in higher education in-state.

The state Board of Education will be asking lawmakers in January to approve a 15-percent increase in funding for higher education over last year's budget, which is a $13 million to $15 million increase.

Priorities for the money include salary increases for staff and money for operating expenses and equipment, said Cheryl Hymas, a state board member.

During a question-and-answer period, the four were asked about a chancellor system as way of making the four institutions more efficient.

But all four men questioned the effectiveness of a chancellor system over the present state Board of Education. They said such a system would only create more bueacracy, rather than efficiency.

Political reality dictates how a college is run and how much money it will receive, more than a state board or one person in charge, Bowen said.

The group also was asked if the state could support four colleges.

Bowen said that closing any one or more of the four would end up "cutting people out of the opportunity to go to college."

Some store owners questioning accuracy of new BID bills

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Business owners in downtown Twin Falls are taking out their tape measures to check their sales spaces as higher fees go into effect in the city's Business Improvement District.

A number of downtown store owners have questioned district records about their stores since receiving the first bills for last month's 50-percent hike in fees, BID Coordinator Sue Ann Jones told the board of directors Tuesday.

Most dispute the square footage on which fees are based. Jones said she and other board members have remeasured some stores.

To date, all the calls have been from business owners who think they are overpaying.

BID officials included the square footage subject to assessment on each store's bill. The fees range from 3.4 cents per square foot for some stores on the BID outer fringe to 15.2 cents a square foot for large retailers in the downtown core.

The levy was raised by the Twin Falls City Council at the urging of the BID's Board of Directors last month. The assessments support promotions, such as last weekend's successful Octoberfest, and mall maintenance. The BID's budget for 1987 is $75,450.

One retailer in BID's outer zone has petitioned to withdraw from the BID, saying he gets no benefit from BID dues. Dan Beard, owner of the Firestone store, said he is paying close to $200 yearly with the fee hike.

"Two hundred is not very much money, but there are some days I sure could have used it," he said. Beard said he is trimming expenses to put his business on more solid footing and, "It's a donation that I don't want to donate."

However, it appears that neither Beard nor the BID Board of Directors can take him out of the district, because BID acts like a district. Assessments are mandatory, and only the City Council can change the BID's boundaries, said City Manager Tom Courtney Tuesday.

Although the BID board briefly discussed difficulties with the BID boundaries, President Les Hazen said later there will be no immediate consideration of changing the bounds.

The situation could cost the downtown area his business, Beard said. "It may become the straw that says to me, 'I'm going to load up all my stuff here and look out on Blue Lakes,'" he said Tuesday.

Other businesses may not be trying to withdraw, but they also are not supporting the BID financially. A July count found more than $17,000 worth of delinquent fees have accumulated downtown.

At their regular board meeting on Tuesday, BID officers began moving gently to to collect overdue assessments by accepting an offer from Elvis Cain, chairman of the board of Cain's Inc., to discuss delinquent accounts with store owners.

"We're starting easy," said Jones. At the same time, the board voted last month to pursue the overdue accounts as soon as possible. If they remain unpaid, they could be turned over to the city attorney for collection, Courtney said.

"The assessments are a legally binding debt on the business," he said.

BID members are scheduled to meet this morning to nominate candidates for four board openings and to hear plans for the downtown's Christmas promotions.

Declared candidates for the board slots are: attorney Evan Robertson, a partner in the firm of Nelson, Rosholt, Robertson, Tolman & Tucker; William Spencer, an owner of Spencer's Office Supplies; Emery Peterson, former Twin Falls mayor and owner of Peterson's Western Wear, and Kari Chadwell, advertising manager for The Times-News.

Nominations also will be accepted from the floor, and members will vote by mail.

Funding pressures force girls' home to close

By CLAUDINE CHAMBERLAIN
Times-News writer

BUHL — The decision to close the McAuley Home For Girls was made Monday night under funding pressure from the state Department of Health and Welfare, a department that provides the home with about 88 percent of its funding.

Willard Abbott, regional services manager for the DHW, said Tuesday that the department decided to consolidate the various girls' homes around Southern Idaho into one home in order to better handle the small number of adolescent girls needing care.

The numbers weren't high enough to contract with the current number of girls' homes, Abbott said, and the department needed to narrow it down to only one contract.

The current number of homes was not available.

The McAuley Home had the opportunity to bid for that position, but decided Monday night that the home would not be capable of meeting the higher requirements of the new center.

Abbott said the Buhl center was caught in a vicious cycle. "To meet the new requirements, they have to have the right staff. They can't fund the staff without more girls at the home, and they can't get more girls if they don't have the right staff," he said.

Steve Woodworth, state youth rehabilitation coordinator with the department in Boise, said DHW had contracted with the McAuley Home for $12,000 for fiscal year 1985-86.

A little over $2,000 was provided to the home by the United Way, and over $6,000 came from private donations, said business manager Mary Stockham. With other funding, the home has a total budget of $127,000, she added.

The DHW funds the home on a per-girl, per-day basis. About 10 girls went through the McAuley

Filer Highway District awards building contract

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

FILER — The Filer Highway District commissioners awarded a contract Tuesday night to Hayes Construction Co. of Buhl, despite objections from another bidder who said his bid was actually the lowest of the qualified bidders on two metal storage buildings for the district.

Bids were opened Oct. 3 and originally awarded to J&M Construction Co., of Filer. However, Tom Lancaster, chairman of the Highway Board, said Tuesday night that bid has been withdrawn because J&M is not an Idaho-licensed builder and the board has learned it cannot "piggy back" through a licensed builder to accept the bid.

The buildings include a three-sided metal shed for equipment and an enclosed shop building, where equipment can be worked on out of the weather.

John Price of Northwest Building Specialists Inc., of Twin Falls, attended the meeting to protest awarding the bid to J&M. He said his firm's bid was $3,000 lower. He also criticized the board's action in awarding the bid to Hayes, but he said his firm and Hayes were the only Public Works-licensed bidders among six who submitted figures.

Price also complained prior to the meeting that no architect specifications were available and bidders were allowed to negotiate bid changes at the bid opening.

Lancaster and his fellow commissioners, Rex Reed and Lyle Williams, said they believe they are in the clear on their action. In the bid call, Lancaster said, the board reserved the right reject any or all bids.

He told Price that the board acted partly because of the quality of the work of the two companies. He said the board was dissatisfied with some of the work of Northwest. Board members said later they also took into consideration comments from Price's previous customers.

Lancaster pointed to the metal portion of a new Filer Fairgrounds building, saying some of the metal sofit, on the underside of the roof overhang, had buckled. Price said that the facia may have buckled, but he was unaware of problems with the other material. He said specifications called for a very thin, non-commercial metal on the facia.

"I plan to take a look at that building

Murray arraigned on 9 charges, bond set

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A Utah man who led Nevada and Idaho officers on a high-speed chase Friday from Wells, Nev., to just west of Twin Falls remained in custody Tuesday in lieu of $70,000 bond.

Leon Richard Murray, 24, of Salt Lake City was arraigned in 5th District Magistrate Court Tuesday on nine felony and misdemeanor charges. The public defender was appointed to represent him, and a preliminary hearing was requested.

He was charged with malicious destruction of property — a Filer city police car; two counts of aggravated assault on a police officer; and possession of stolen property. Total bond set on these charges amounts to $70,000.

He also faces charges of failure to yield to an emergency vehicle, two counts of reckless driving, failure to stop for police road blocks and evading a police officer to avoid arrest.

He pleaded innocent to the misdemeanor charges and was returned to the Twin Falls County jail, pending additional court appearances.

Murray is also wanted in Wells on a stolen vehicle charge. He is alleged to have left Wells Friday in a stolen 1985 Ford pickup truck, heading into Idaho with Nevada Highway Patrol officers in pursuit. At the Idaho-Nevada state line, Idaho State police took over the chase, clocking the truck under pursuit at up to 110 miles per hour.

Murray was taken into custody at the junction of U.S. highways 30 and 93, west of Twin Falls, after the vehicle he was driving rammed the Filer city police car, in which Police Chief Don Barkley was attempting to force the truck across Highway 30 and onto a gravel road.

Cpl. Charles Cox and three other State Police officers from Twin Falls, along with Barkley and several Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department officers assisted in stopping the vehicle and making the arrest.

Alger pleas innocent in Jerome district court

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — Timothy Alger repeated a plea of innocent Tuesday when he appeared in 5th District Court here on a charge of having escaped from the Jerome County jail two years ago.

Alger, 28, pleaded innocent in Magistrate Court earlier this month and was bound over to District Court for trial. The trial date will be set later. Alger remains in the Jerome County jail in lieu of $450,000 bond.

In his appearance Tuesday, Public Defender Randy Stoker agreed to allow a motion for dismissal of the escape charge to be continued and it was given an indefinite continuance by the court.

Speaking on his own behalf, Alger asked that he be granted free use of a telephone in the county jail area to call his wife and family. He said he has been refused such priviledges, except for calling his attorney.

Judge Phillip Becker denied the request, saying Alger can continue to call his attorney, who can relay messages to his family.

Alger faces seven felony charges, including the escape count. Other charges involve incidents leading up to his arrest in 1984 in Jerome County.

He and a companion, Jeffery Morris, allegedly led authorities from Twin Falls and Jerome counties on a chase on both sides of Snake River Canyon, during which an Uzi semi-automatic weapon was fired at the pursuit vehicles, wounding one Twin Falls police officer.

Morris was arrested at the end of the chase and Alger was taken into custody several days later. He allegedly hid out in the desert and farm area of Jerome County, during which time he is charged with breaking into a farm house and taking a vehicle.

He was arrested after he drove back to Twin Falls and stopped at a motorhome he and Morris had left parked at a shopping center. Alger was attempting to again evade police, charges say, and was arrested after he fell a short distance into the canyon.

He and Morris are alleged to have broken out of the Jerome jail in May 1984, about a month after they were arrested. Missouri officers later arrested the pair and they were returned to face local charges. They also have been charged with armed robberies in Boise and the state of Washington.

Historian to speak about conspiracies

TWIN FALLS — Ralph Epperson, a historian and author from Arizona, is coming to Twin Falls to expose the conspiratorial forces he says are behind most of history's major events.

Epperson will be speaking to the public on tonight at the Holiday Inn. His speech, entitled "The Unseen Hand" begins at 8 p.m. Tickets are $3 for adults and $1 for students.

Epperson contends that history did not happen by accident. Unlike most historians who subscribe to the "accidental" view of history, Epperson subscribes to the conspiratorial view, according to a press release from the Magic Valley TRIM (Tax Reform Immediately) committee.

"By definition," Epperson says, "a conspiracy is a secret agreement among a group of people to carry out an evil or illegal action. The record clearly shows that history's major events were planned and executed by secret societies whose goal has been to enslave mankind. Anyone who ignores the facts does so at his own peril."

Epperson is the author of a recently published book entitled "The Unseen Hand — An Introduction to the Conspiratorial View of History." He has been doing research on the subject for 22 years, and he has lectured widely for 12 years.

One provision of the law, a so-called good samaritan provision, is already in effect. It protects people who help clean up hazardous waste problems from legal penalties.

Other parts of the law to go into effect in 1987 require hazardous materials permits, insurance for spills, and a hazardous materials/waste account in the state treasury to enforce the new law. The penalties for violating the law involve civil and criminal fines of up to $10,000 or prison terms.

Jones said that had the entire law been in effect at the time of the accident, the state would have had a better means of stopping trucks carrying hazardous materials. Jones has been active in raising concerns about nuclear waste shipments passing through Idaho to Hanford.

Jones called the new law "adequate" as a first step to regulating hazardous materials and waste. But, he said, the state still has considerable work to do on the nuclear aspect.

State authority is largely preempted by federal law in this area. Jones called for state action to ensure truck safety equipment and routing through non-populous areas. He said steps must be taken to prevent hijacking and terrorist incidents involving nuclear material.

The state has 10 years to make these changes, because the nuclear waste repository location won't be announced until the 1990s.

State Rep. John O. Sessions, R-Driggs, chairman of the House Transportation Committee, said the handling of the accident salvage operation appeared to have been done properly. He said the state needs to give the new hazardous materials law a chance to work.

"It's plowing a new field. It's a good law," he said.

(fairgrounds structure) tomorrow." Price said after the meeting. "We haven't had any complaints from the Fair Board or manager and none from the general contractor."

Price said his firm's bid is about $119 lower than the figure offered by Hayes, but he added that isn't a major amount compared to the $3,000 difference of J&M's bid.

The former storage building and shop at the Filer Highway District grounds burned down last fall. Insurance money from the loss will adequately cover the new building, Lancaster said. The total adjusted bid from Hayes is $22,450.01 and insurance payments will be $25,000, Lancaster said.

The board negotiated with all bidders, Lancaster said, allowing them to bring their bids up to a uniform standard following bid opening.

"We didn't have the money to hire an architect, and for two shed-type buildings, we didn't think it was practical," the board chairman said.

As a result, the builder will prepare a simple design for the structures. Price said this not an unusual practice and his company would have been willing to do that.

Price said his firm had considered filing a complaint to the state Public Works Board, but that will be decided when Wayne Bohrn, president of Northwest, is back in town.

Lancaster said board members reviewed procedures with their attorney and there appear to be no violations of the law.

The home will close soon, after a few more things are taken care of, said Director Jean Dowd. An auction will be held to sell some items of furniture and other household goods, she said. The building is owned by the Catholic Church and will be returned to the church after closing.

Bids for management of the new center will be accepted starting Nov. 3, Woodworth said. He added that the department hopes to have implemented the new facility by the first of the year. Possible bidders for the new center are the Idaho Youth Ranch and the North Idaho Children's Home, he said.

"This transition is hard on everyone," he said, sympathizing with the closure of the McAuley Home.

Candidates for governor release polls with different results

By The Associated Press

Depending on whose poll you believe, the Idaho gubernatorial race either is getting tighter, or Democrat Cecil Andrus still holds to a pretty substantial lead over Republican Lt. Gov. David Leroy.

Both candidates have released recent polls, each showing sharply different findings.

Leroy said results of a poll conducted last week show him gaining on Andrus in his bid for governor, pulling to within less than 6 percentage points. Andrus released a poll showing Andrus with a 19-point lead.

The Leroy survey, covering 300 voters statewide, was conducted Oct. 7-9 by DCM group of Arlington, Va. Leroy said it showed Andrus with a 45.8-40.5 percent lead. The poll recorded 11.4 percent of the respondents as undecided and 2.3 percent refusing to answer. The error margin of the poll or details of the way it was conducted were not released.

Public opinion polls conducted in late summer reportedly showed Andrus with an 8-10 point lead over Leroy, a margin the Andrus camp called conservative by its estimates.

Andrus spokesman Marc Johnson also questioned the statistical validity of a poll based on a statewide sample as small as 300. He said the DCM poll results might be intended to boost prospects for a last-minute campaign appearance in the state by President Reagan on behalf of GOP candidates.

Johnson said a poll of 451 voters in southern Idaho's traditionally Republican 2nd Congressional District Sept. 19-21 showed Andrus with a 19-point lead over Leroy. Johnson said the poll, conducted by Secrist Associates of Washington, D.C., showed Andrus with 54 percent, Leroy with 35 percent and 11 percent undecided. He said the margin for error was 3 percent but provided no other details of the poll.

Campaign manager Chuck Lempesis said the Leroy poll shows the lieutenant governor leading by slight margins in Ada and Canyon and big margins in central Idaho.

Debate between media and Aryan group opposed

COEUR d'ALENE (AP) — A proposed televised debate between representatives of white supremacist groups and the media should not be held in a high school auditorium, says a member of the Kootenai County Task Force on Human Relations.

Lawyer Norm Gissel complained to the school board Monday that one of the invited speakers, Pastor Robert Miles of Cohoctah, Mich., once was involved in the burning of buses used to integrate schools.

"I'm concerned with the recent bombings and the terror the children of color feel in this community," Gissel said. "I feel this is an educational experience they can forego for now."

KING Broadcasting Co. of Seattle contacted the school district last week with its request to use the Coeur d'Alene high school auditorium for a debate featuring Miles and the Rev. Richard Butler of the Church of Jesus Christ Christian (Aryan Nations) based in nearby Hayden Lake.

Superintendent Warren Bakes said the station's application had been returned for more information.

"When we get it back, if I feel it's controversial, I'll take it to the board for approval," Bakes said.

"You can be sure we won't put our students or our facilities in jeopardy," he told Gissel.

The lawyer said his children were terrified following the pipe bombing Sept. 15 at the home of the task force's chairman, the Rev. Bill Wassmuth, and three bombings downtown Sept. 29. There were no injuries.

Four people with links to the Aryan Nations group have been arrested in the investigation into the bombings.

"I'm afraid for my family," Gissel said. "My wife's Arabic. When someone's nuts enough to set off a bomb in a priest's home, it takes no imagination to guess the next step."

He told board members the debate was designed to be "Nazi propaganda."

Commissioners probe personnel procedures

REXBURG (AP) — Amid increasing allegations of salary inequities and other improprieties in the county clerk's office, Madison County commissioners have launched an investigation into the personnel procedures of all county departments.

"I never had an idea any of this was happening," Commissioner Wayne Beck said. "I think we're trying to correct an inequity here."

The investigation ordered Monday night culminated what had begun as a single complaint against County Clerk Nellis Garner involving overtime by the county's head computer operator. But in trying to resolve it over the past month, the commissioners have been bombarded with complaints from many county workers.

Among the charges leveled at Mrs. Garner, who is seeking her fifth term in November, were unauthorized raises for workers in her office as well as other unauthorized expenditures including a Christmas bonus for her daughter.

"I'm not alone," Mrs. Garner said Tuesday. "I'm not the only office."

She said the raises referred to were included in her budget, and she acknowledged a number of the expenditures cited, specifically pointing out that her daughter was working for the county Civil Defense Department at the time she received the bonus.

Commission Chairman Dell Klingler, outlining the specific areas of concern to the commission, said he was not aware of any problems since taking office 12 years ago, but he recommended that all information be turned over to county Prosecutor Dale Thomson and that the board call for an audit.

"My opinion of Nellis is that she is an efficient county clerk," he said.

Among the commission's major concerns, he said, was salary inequity ranging up to 11 percent among various courthouse offices with employees in Mrs. Garner's office the highest paid of all. Klingler said the commissioners were considering a uniform policy manual for the county.

Governor wants meeting with northern timber company

BOISE (AP) — Gov. John Evans says he's received complaints about a northern Idaho company's timber operations, and wants to talk with company officials.

Evans on Tuesday said he received a letter from the Priest River Chamber of Commerce complaining about Plum Creek Timber Co., complaining about the company's logging operations.

"I have heard that Plum Creek's increased harvesting is causing other loggers real problems. I want to find out what the company is doing and why," Evans said. A meeting is scheduled for Tuesday in Priest River. Officials from the chamber of commerce and Panhandle National Forest also will attnd.

The governor said Plum Creek is harvesting most of its Washington and Idaho timber holdings in the next 10 to 15 years. Most of its Idaho timber is within the boundaries of national forests.

James R. Curtis, Boise, former Director of Operations for Ada County

"When I was struck down by neuropathy, a disease which attacked my nervous system, I couldn't perform my job. I applied for Social Security disability."

"At first, I was denied full disability benefits. Finally, after a hearing, I was granted full benefits. I lost one whole year in back benefits. Even though I appealed to Washington, nothing happened."

"I contacted Senator Steve Symms and he took immediate action. Best of all, he got results and I got every cent of my back benefits."

"Thank you, Steve, from the bottom of my heart."

PUC denies UPL a reprieve

BOISE (AP) — State utility regulators have refused to give Utah Power & Light Co. a temporary reprieve from a ruling making a rival power company the sole supplier of electricity to Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

But the state Public Utilities Commission on Tuesday granted UP&L limited say in the contract outlining the terms between Idaho Power Co. and the Department of Energy for power used at INEL in eastern Idaho.

UP&L on Tuesday argued for a stay of an earlier PUC order making Idaho Power the exclusive provider of power at INEL.

The Idaho Supreme Court is considering UP&L's appeal of that ruling.

By making UP&L an intervenor in Idaho Power's contract, the Salt Lake City-based utility can present testimony on the exclusive 10-year contract between Idaho Power and the DOE, which is pending before the PUC.

Idaho Power spokesman Larry Crowley said that since 1957, Idaho Power has been the primary provider of electricity, with UP&L contracted for backup power that Crowley said was rarely used.

Under the current contract that expires Nov. 1, Idaho Power was paid $3.2 million for primary power, and UP&L $1.2 million for backup power, Crowley said. Under the proposed 10-year contract, Idaho Power's revenues would remain the same, though the company would provide all of INEL's energy needs.

"The DOE didn't want to keep wasting money," Crowley said, referring to money paid for backup power seldom used.

The PUC rejected UP&L's contention that the utility would suffer irreparable harm if the stay were denied, both monetarily and through loss of a certificate of convenience and necessity, which authorizes it to grant electricity in Butte County.

"Proof of irreparable damage is clear, both in monetary terms and loss of property rights," argued Wesley Merrill, a Pocatello attorney representing UP&L.

DOE attorney Betty Hollowell said UP&L's contentions that it would suffer irreparable harm were unfounded.

Jones seeks dismissal of land suit

BOISE (AP) — Attorney General Jim Jones has asked the Idaho Supreme Court to dismiss a lawsuit over a state land trade at Priest Lake, calling it "one of the best land exchanges ever made by the state Land Board."

Jones filed a brief with the Supreme Court on Tuesday, asking it to dismiss an appeal filed by opponents of the land trade. A district judge earlier ruled against them.

In May, 1985, the five-member Land Board voted 3-2 to accept a trade with Diamond Lands Corp. The state received 11,300 acres of land from Diamond, in exchange for state-owned land around Priest Lake. Diamond planned a major residential-recreation development at Huckleberry Bay.

Environmental groups opposed the deal, saying the state wasn't getting enough value for the prime lakefront property it was surrendering, and the deal could have a major impact on the life style of area residents.

Jones said Tuesday the state made a profit of $2.5 million on the deal and got three times as much land as it gave up.

"In addition, there have been many side benefits, such as acquisition of the Squaw Bay property at a bargain value and a requirement that certain choice beachfronts be open to public access," he said.

Humpherys appointed

BOISE (AP) — Col. Rich Humpherys, superintendent of the Idaho State Police force, has been appointed to the Idaho Peace Officers Standards and Training Advisory Council.

The governor's office announced the appointment on Tuesday. Also named to the panel was Nez Perce County Prosecutor Steven Tobiason of Lewiston.

Sharon Harrigfeld Hixon, Boise, was appointed to the New Horizons Task Force. It was set up last year to assist in enforcing fair housing laws. Reappointed were cochairmen Paul Pusey of Boise and Camilo Lopez, Caldwell.

Also reappointed to the task force were members Dee Hill and Frank Sanchez, both of Idaho Falls; Clair Wetherell, Mountain Home, and Boise residents John Browning, Aubrey Gaines, Michael Gray, Ken Monroe, Ben Pease, Rudy Pena, Cherie Buckner Thompson and Randolph Wilson.

Boston forces AL playoffs to seventh game

AL Series:
California and Boston are tied, 3 games to 3
Game 7: Tonight at 6:20 p.m.

BOSTON (AP) — Gene Mauch and the California Angels are down to their final game, against the Boston Red Sox and history.

The Red Sox, behind Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd's gutty pitching and Spike Owen's four hits, charged past California 10-4 Tuesday night, evening the American League playoffs and setting up a decisive seventh game.

"Now, we'll find out which team knows how to win when it has to win," Mauch said.

So far, Mauch and the Angels have never done it.

California, within one strike of the first pennant in its 26-year existence on Sunday, blew that game and has now squandered its 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven series.

Mauch, who has never guided a team to the World Series in his 25-year career, gets one last chance Wednesday night when he sends left-hander John Candelaria against Boston's ace right-hander Roger Clemens, the most dominant pitcher in baseball this year.

"All my nervous, frustrating and worry days are behind me," Mauch said. "The only people who feel pressure are those who don't know how to handle it."

The fidgety Boyd showed he could deal with the must-win situation in Game 6. He settled down after a shaky start, and said he thought Boston's momentum would carry the Red Sox to the World Series.

"I would like to think my man Roger Clemens is going to pitch a marvelous game and we'll win the seventh game," Boyd said.

Boyd, tagged for towering RBI doubles in the first inning by Reggie Jackson and Doug DeCinces, went on to allow just one more run in seven innings' work.

He left the game to a thunderous roar of "Oil Can, Oil Can" from the crowd of 32,998, along with fans lining adjacent rooftops and clinging to signs above Fenway Park.

"It was lots of fun out there," Boyd, who lost Game 3 despite a strong outing, said.

Boston, meanwhile, pounded Kirk McCaskill and three relievers for 16 hits, including Owen's four and three by Marty Barrett.

The Red Sox' victory came two days after they avoided elimination in an 11-inning emotional roller-coaster, and helped to keep slapping down theories that they choke in big games.

"I don't think winning or losing (Game 7) will have anything to do with that history," Boston Manager John McNamara said. "If that isn't dispelled by now, it could go on for eternity."

The Angels mostly said Sunday's loss did not effect the outcome of Game 6. But second baseman Rob Wilfong admitted the crushing defeat had weighed heavy on the team's collective conscious.

"I think it may have carried over," he said. "When we came to the clubhouse today, everybody was really serious."

California played for the third straight game without rookie first baseman Wally Joyner. It has not been determined whether Joyner, batting .455 in the playoffs before being hospitalized with a bacterial infection in his lower right leg, will be available for Game 7.

The Angels started Game 6 like they did not need Joyner, taking the 2-0 lead on Jackson's and DeCinces' doubles. California went on to load the bases and seemed to be one batter away from knocking out Boyd before being overhauled by the Boston express.

Boston tied it in the bottom of the first and broke the game open by scoring five times in the third, two on first baseman Bobby Grich's throwing error.

Boyd, meanwhile, breezed through the middle innings. His only blemish after his first-inning troubles was a solo home run by Brian Downing in the seventh. He pitched nine-hit ball over seven innings, striking out five and walking one on a humid night.

The Angels added another run in the eighth off Bob Stanley when Dick Schofield singled and later trotted home on Owen's throwing error from shortstop, but the run was meaningless.

Boyd evened his record in the series while McCaskill, who had plagued Boston during the regular season, was the loser, as he was in Game 2.

Boyd overcame a first-inning in which he threw 44 pitches and was nearly out of the game. With one out, Ruppert Jones fouled off several balls and walked on 11 pitches. With two outs, Jackson doubled high off the 37-foot-high wall in left-center.

The Angels went on to load the bases on a single and hit batsman before Boyd saved himself and the Red Sox by retiring Wilfong on a popup.

Indians, Dietrich gain district finals

Prep Volleyball Class A-4

By SCOTT TUDEHOPE
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — Top-seeded Oakley went down not once but twice to defending Southside champion Shoshone Tuesday evening.

The Hornets, beaten in three games in the first meeting with Shoshone, were then turned back in three more, 15-13, 15-17, 15-3, in the sudden-death playoff. The Indians thus assured themselves of a trip to the state tournament in Blackfoot next week and will collide at 7 p.m. Thursday with their Northside sub-district counterparts in the Jerome gymnasium for the Fourth District A-4 title. Both will go to state with Thursday's matches merely filling the bracketing.

Hagerman took third place after losing to Oakley 15-11, 15-13 and Raft River claimed fourth when they fell to the Pirates 15-11, 15-9.

If the 15-3 deciding game in the championship was somewhat surprising, considering the previous close scores, chalk it up to fatigue. The match ended at 10:30 p.m.

"Actually, I was concerned that we would be burned out that late," said Shoshone Coach Larry Messick. "But they played Hagerman and it showed up, I think."

Shoshone relied on senior setter Patti O'Maley to challenge the Hornet lineup at the net but frequently leaned on the consistent serving of Emily Stimpson and Shelley Rowlan.

"I was really concerned after those first game," Messick said. "But they really worked together finally in that last game and looked good."

It was revenge the Indians had on their minds, he said. Now boasting a 17-4 season record, one of those record losses was to the Hornets, they were clearly gunning for their old rivals.

"We had two goals set for this year — to beat Oakley and Dietrich," the coach added, noting they both have been attained.

In Jayvee play, Shoshone defeated Hagerman 15-11, 7-15, 15-9 for the title and a 17-0 seasonal record.

Devils end Bliss' upset hopes

By MICHAEL VANAUSDELN
Times-News writer

RICHFIELD — After defeating the Bliss Bears 15-10, 15-12 earlier in the day, the Dietrich Tigers had to come from behind to take the Northside Conference Volleyball Tournament by slipping past the Bears 10-15, 15-8, 15-6.

Dietrich will meet Shoshone at 7 p.m. Thursday in Jerome for the Fourth District A-4 championship. But that is for ornamental hardware only as both already have their reservations made for the state tournament in Blackfoot next week.

Led by the serving of Kim Bowman and the intelligent net play of Dawn Stoddard, the Tigers were able to dominate the last two games of thier match with the Bears who took the early lead, winning the first game behind the powerful striking ability of Shea Benscoter.

Benscoter practically ruled the first game, serving three aces and sending hard-hit strikes into the middle of the Tiger defense. Dietrich made a comeback after being down 5-9 and closed it to 10-11 before the Bliss defense stiffened up and won the game.

But Dietrich proved it deserved its No. 1 seed by shooting out to a 8-1 lead in the second game. The Tigers maintained their lead with a Wendy Southwick-serving stretch later in the game that saw Dietrich run four straight points on the Bears.

In the final game, Bowman served in her own duet of long stretches and Stoddard played the net with soft drops and hard strikes, keeping the Bliss team off balance. Like the second game, the Tigers jumped out to an early lead and Bliss wasn't able to recover from the lead.

Bliss gained their place in the championship game after defeating the Richfield Tigers in an emotional, three-game match, 15-7, 9-15, 15-11.

Richfield played in three matches during the day, leaving them exhausted by the tough third game. Annie Whitesell, the heart and soul of the Tigers, led Richfield in their two previous wins of the day but like her teammates, found that the wear of both matches — both of which went three games and found the Tigers having to overcome a 0-1 defecit — were too much.

The Tigers defeated the second-seeded Carey Panthers, 9-15, 15-5, 15-9, and the Camas County Mushers, 10-15, 15-13, 15-13.

Southern Idaho rolls past Treasure Valley

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho ran its volleyball record to 34-7 and 3-0 in regional competition Wednesday night by downing the Treasure Valley Chukars 15-1, 18-20, 15-8, 15-10.

The victory brings the Golden Eagles to their final home regional match of the season. They will entertain the North Idaho Cardinals at 7 p.m. Friday. After that, Coach Ben Stroud and his women will invade Ricks and North Idaho in an attempt to win the homecourt advantage for the regional finals next month.

Minico survives, Burley out

By BRAD BRELAND
Times-News writer

POCATELLO — Minico and Highland are one loss away from ending their seasons while the Twin Falls Bruins will see their first action of the Region III Class A-1 volleyball playoffs Thursday.

Pocatello, the No. 2 seed in the tournament, went undefeated here Tuesday night, topping Burley 15-6, 15-6 but had to struggle to beat Highland 15-12, 13-15, 15-2.

Prep Volleyball Class A-1

Minico stayed allved for a shot at a state berth by ousting Burley 15-9, 15-5. Earlier, Highland beat Minico 15-9, 15-8.

Pocatello can eliminate the Spartans Thursday when they meet at 7 p.m. in Twin Falls' gymnasium. Twin Falls will meet Highland at the same time. If Twin Falls and Pocatello win those Thursday openers, the title game will follow. If one or the other loses, it will have to play the surviving once-defeated team before the championship finals.

After both Burley and Minico had trouble matching up against the taller Pocatello teams, they met in the loser-out match and for a while it appeared Burley was capable of the upset.

Nicole Williams sparked Burley to an early 8-1 lead in the first game with some key kills. But the Spartans came back and outscored Burley 14-1 to take the first set.

"Sometimes we don't have it and sometimes we're awesome. That (the first game) was one of our not-to-its," said Minico Coach Debbie Bridges.

Minico turned the tables in the second game, going on top 6-1 and Burley never could get closer.

The Bobcats tried to mount a late comeback, but were foiled by spikes from Minico's Karry Rathe, who ended the match with an ace.

Pocatello's Indians sent Burley to the loser bracket but had a tougher time than the scores would indicate. In the opener, Burley closed an early Pocatello lead to 9-6. But the Indians then ran the next six points. In the second game, Pocatello spotted the Bobcats an early 4-0 lead. But within minutes, Pocatello had a commanding 8-4 lead.

Carter drives Mets to within one victory of championship

NL Series:
New York leads Houston, 3 games to 2
Game 6: Today at 1:05 p.m.

NEW YORK (AP) — The National League playoffs were even until Gary Carter got even.

"There is justice in the world," the New York Mets catcher said after his 12th-inning single, ending a 1-for-21 slump, drove in the winning run Tuesday as the Mets beat the Houston Astros 2-1 in Game 5 of the playoffs. The victory gave the Mets a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven series.

"Whether I get a lot of hits or not, it's the key hits that count," Carter said. "Now, it's a good feeling to be up 3-to-2 and have (Astros left-hander Bob) Knepper tomorrow. Hopefully, we'll be able to do something against him."

The series moves back to Houston for Game 6 Wednesday with Knepper, 17-12, going against Mets left-hander Bob Ojeda, 18-5. Knepper was the starter in Game 3, while Ojeda won Game 2.

"He's been our big guy all year," Mets Manager Dave Johnson said of Carter. "He was pressing a little, but he also was hitting some balls right on the nose and not coming up with anything. But I can't think of anybody I'd like to have up in a situation like that more than Gary Carter."

Admitting to a deep and gnawing frustration over the slump, Carter said it was made even worse in Game 3 when Charlie Kerfeld, who he touched for the game-winning hit, made a behind-the-back stab of his hard grounder, then showed him the ball before he threw to first.

"I don't know if he was showing me up or what," Carter said. "But that would key somebody up."

The Astros lost a run in the second inning on a controversial double-play call, and the Mets turned another outfield double play, started by left fielder Mookie Wilson, to deny the Astros another scoring chance. The Astros scored their only run in the fifth inning on a grounder by Bill Doran that probably should have been a double play.

"It's not going to do me any good to rant and rave or tear the clubhouse apart," Astros Manager Hal Lanier said. "We had some other opportunities to win and we didn't."

Dwight Gooden of the Mets and Nolan Ryan of the Astros took the game into extra innings, tied 1-1. The Astros outhit the Mets 9-2 as Ryan was nearly untouchable. The first hit off Ryan was Darryl Strawberry's fifth-inning homer, and Ryan left after giving up just two hits in nine innings, striking out 12 and walking one.

Gooden worked 10 innings in the longest outing of his major-league career, allowing all nine Houston hits. Jesse Orosco won his second game in relief, pitching two hitless innings. Orosco now has pitched five scoreless innings in the playoffs.

"I let everything I had go in the ninth because I had never pitched 10 innings before," Gooden said. "Then, when I came back to the dugout after the ninth, nobody said anything. It was like getting ready for the game all over again."

Ryan called the game his best since coming back from the disabled list for the second time this season.

"I didn't have a very good curveball, but I went to the changeup in the middle of the game," Ryan said. "The is the best one I've pitched since I came back."

When Wally Backman singled with one out in the 12th, it was only New York's third hit of the game. The hard one-hopper kicked off third baseman Denny Walling's glove and bounced high in the air, allowing Backman to reach first. In trying to pick off Backman, Kerfeld threw wildly for an error, and Backman went to second.

Kerfeld then walked Keith Hernandez intentionally, bringing up Carter. The count went to 3-2, and Carter fouled off two pitches before lining a hard single up the middle, easily scoring a sliding Backman ahead of center fielder Billy Hatcher's throw.

"I kept thinking positive," Carter said. "I wanted to have a positive frame of mind — no negative thoughts. When I came up to the plate, I thought I was going to come through."

As he rounded first, Carter raised both his fists in the air, the futility finally over.

Gooden said the thought of retribution entered his mind as he saw Carter's single go through the middle.

"If anybody deserves it, Gary did," Gooden said. "The other day when Gary hit one back to the mound, Kerfeld showed him the ball. That can come back to haunt you."

Carter, confused and distressed by his lack of production after a 105 RBI season, had only a double in Game 2 and had gone hitless in his first four at-bats this time.

"Yes, it was frustrating," Carter said. "I was fortunate I got the right situation. I just got pumped up that much more."

New Zealand meets U.S. in showdown of cup challengers

FREMANTLE, Australia (AP) — The unbeaten fiberglass yacht New Zealand, challenged ashore but not at sea, breezed to its eighth victory Tuesday in the first round of the America's Cup elimination series to set up a showdown with Dennis Conner and the U.S. boat Stars & Stripes.

Despite losing a man overboard, New Zealand, skippered by Chris Dickson, scored by four minutes over Britain's White Crusader, sailed by Harold Cudmore. It was the third loss in nine races for the British.

The match between New Zealand, the only unbeaten boat in the round-robin series against 12 competitors, and Conner, who is challenging the legality of the fiberglass hull, is set for Thursday.

Stars & Stripes won its seventh race against one loss Tuesday when Courageous IV of the United States broke its boom 11 minutes before the start and was forced to withdraw. Courageous is winless in eight matches.

Skipper John Kolius kept America II, the New York Yacht Club entry, tied with Conner one point behind New Zealand with an easy win over Heart of America (USA) Tuesday.

In a duel between brothers, French Kiss, sailed by Marc Pajot, routed Challenge France, sailed by Yves Pajot, by 17 minutes, 40 seconds, but the lopsided victory was overturned by a protest committee.

The disqualification gives Challenge France with its first victory and left French Kiss with four points instead of five.

The incident that drew the protest took place prior to the start. The committee ruled that French Kiss violated rule 41.1 which states a boat tacking or gybing must keep clear of a boat sailing on a tack.

Azzurra of Italy was unable to finish its race against Canada II when it suffered gear failure midway through the event and Italia defeated Eagle (USA), skippered by Rod Davis. Italia led throughout the race.

New Zealand still must race against Eagle on Wednesday before its meeting against Stars & Stripes. Dickson then would appear to have clear sailing for the remainder of the first round, meeting Canada II on Friday and ending the series Saturday against Challenge France.

Meanwhile, Conner has been battling New Zealand ashore for almost a week. His syndicate has demanded that the fiberglass New Zealand boat be resurveyed. The demand was in a letter presented Sunday to the Yacht Club Costa Smeralda and made public Tuesday.

The Italian yacht club is in charge of the elimination series to pick a challenger to face Australia in the America's Cup, which begins Jan. 31.

It is the second time Conner's syndicate has made the demand. The controversy centers around the fiberglass construction of the New Zealand boat. Should it be lighter in the bow and stern, according to Conner, it would have a definite advantage in heavy weather.

Lloyd's Register, which oversaw the specifications and construction of the boat, has denied the need for a resurvey.

Malin Burnham, Stars & Stripes' syndicate chairman, said 10 of the 13 challengers back his group's position.

Syndicate officials said it had not been decided whether to race Stars & Stripes under protest against New Zealand.

White Crusader was expected to provide a good test for New Zealand. But after the start won by Cudmore, the New Zealanders powered to an easy victory.

Cudmore offered no excuses.

"Chris was faster upwind throughout the race," he said.

The elimination series to select a challenger consists of three rounds with the first round providing one point for each win. That jumps to five points in the second round and 12 in the third. The top four boats move into the semifinals.

Gary Sheard, who had been the designated skipper of Steak 'n Kidney, the Eastern Australian Defense Syndicate entry in the defender series, was released Tuesday by syndicate chief Syd Fischer. He has been replaced by Fred Neill who, according to syndicate spokesmen, has been steering the yacht extensively since its launching in Sydney and in its trials off Fremantle.

No reason was given for the change.

Jerome, Twin Falls girls shoot for district titles

By The Times-News

Cross country

The Jerome Tigers should add a couple of more district cross country championship trophies to the showcase today while the Twin Falls Bruin girls will be seeking one of their own Friday afternoon in Pocatello.

The Tigers are the odds-on favorites to win both the boys and girls titles in the Fourth District Class B fest, slated for 5 p.m. today at the Jerome Country Club. Not even the Jerome coaching staff will say for sure how many of these titles the Tigers have won since the B division was formed.

But this should be a first step that will culminate in Jerome boys winning their 13th state crown next week in Kellogg while the Tiger girls will be shooting for their seventh.

"Judging from what we saw in the conference meet, it doesn't appear we can expect a lot of competition," admits Jerome Coach Tim Dunne. In both divisions, the Tigers came within one place of a perfect score.

The Tigers could get perfect 15s today. Glenn Leavitt is favored to pace the boys parade and Laura Jensen should run away with the girls division.

Only Filer and Wood River will join Jerome in fielding a full boys team, meaning two teams and the top 10 individuals will advance to state. In the girls division, only Jerome and Wood River have full teams so only the championship five will advance to state.

The Class A Region III finals are slated for 3 p.m. Friday at Pocatello's Red Hill course.

This brings together Twin Falls, Minico, Pocatello and Highland and the one-two teams and the top 10 individuals will move on to state.

Pocatello is heavily favored in the boys division with Twin Falls having an outside chance of qualifying sophomores Jeff Dodds and John Conover for the individual portion.

In the girls division, Jenny Hannah and her Bruin girl teammates enter as favorites but, Coach Duane Stands says, "Highland always has that chance, although we've been able to dominate them pretty well in the last couple of races. But this week we'll find out how tough we are. Holly Peckenpaugh is coming up with shin splints and they forced her out of track last spring."

Stands said he would be surprised if Hannah was beaten, noting "not the way she ran away from them in the conference meet last week."

Skins hand tee to Zendejas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Max Zendejas, the man the Washington Redskins have chosen to replace veteran placekicker Mark Moseley, said Tuesday he had "a real good feeling" he would be given the job after he watched Moseley falter against the Dallas Cowboys.

Zendejas, a native of Mexico, was cut by Dallas prior to the opening of the 1986 NFL regular season. He kept practicing and received tryouts from San Diego, Buffalo and the Redskins, but did not get any offers.

"I was getting tired of waiting and waiting," he said. "I'd stay at home Sundays and Mondays watching the games on TV, just hoping somehow I'd get a chance and not have to wait until next year."

Zendejas' saw his opportunity Sunday afternoon when he watched Moseley botch a field goal and a conversion against the Cowboys and then get snubbed in two subsequent field goal situations. Moseley, a 16-year veteran who had missed 6 of 12 field goal attempts this season, said tearfully after the game he had a hunch he had played his last game as a member of the Redskins.

And Zendejas knew his career in Washington was soon to begin. "The next morning (Monday) I got up early and called my agent," he said. "I had a real good feeling I would get the call from Washington."

The call did come, and the 23-year-old who kicked 77 field goals for the University of Arizona immediately hopped a plane bound for the nation's capital.

Max is not the first kicker with the last name Zendejas to play with the Redskins. Max' cousin, Tony, received a $150,000 signing bonus in the summer of 1985 to compete with Moseley for the job, but lost the competition and was subsequently traded to the Houston Oilers.

Zendejas, who made 14 of 23 field goals for Arizona from 50 yards or more, performed well at his tryout at Redskins Park four weeks ago and was placed at the top of the team's list of available kickers. The Redskins signed him to a three-year contract believed to be in excess of $350,000.

Berry inks 4-year Blazer pact

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — First-round draft pick Walter Berry, last season's college basketball player of the year, signed a four-year contract Tuesday with the Portland Trail Blazers.

Terms of the agreement weren't announced, but team officials said it included incentives that will pay Berry more money if he performs at a certain level.

"It gives him the opportunity to become the player he thinks he can be and we think he can be in this league," said Bucky Buckwalter, Blazers' vice president for basketball operations. "If he plays well in his rookie year, we have some bonuses that will allow him to do very well financially."

Berry, the 14th player chosen in this year's NBA college draft, worked out with the Blazers on Tuesday. He said he was happy to get the contract issue behind him.

"I've just been sitting home and worrying about it," he said.

Berry said he knows he faces a tough battle for playing time against veterans Kenny Carr, Steve Johnson and Jerome Kersey, as well as Spanish rookie Fernando Martin.

"I think it's going to be very serious," Berry said.

Asked if he ever had to spend much time on the bench before, Berry said, "Never in my life."

"I'm sure I'll be able to adjust to it," he said.

The 6-foot-8 Berry, who averaged 23 points and 11 rebounds per game as a junior at St. John's last season, said he knows he'll have to make up for lost time after missing the first 10 days of the fall training camp.

He said he plans to work with the coaches on his own time.

New Portland Coach Mike Schuler, who has been force feeding the Blazers his team defensive system, said Berry will have a hard time catching his teammates.

"He's obviously way behind both on and off the floor," Schuler said. "Walter has to make an adjustment to everything ... He'll have a lot of things thrown at him."

Feeney clears Astro pitcher

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Scott, the Houston Astros' pitching star who has baffled the New York Mets twice in the National League playoffs, Tuesday was declared innocent of scuffing baseballs by NL president Chub Feeney.

Feeney met with Frank Cashen, the Mets' general manager, before the fifth game of the best-of-seven series.

"As far as we know, Mr. Scott is not guilty of this infraction," Feeney said in a statement. "A man is innocent until proven guilty.

"However, we will be watching closely the next time he pitches, and will take appropriate action if necessary."

Scott's next start is scheduled Thursday at Houston in the decisive seventh game, if the series goes that far.

The Houston right-hander, who pitched for the Mets from 1979-82 before being traded to the Astros for outfielder Danny Heep in December 1982, won the first and fourth games of the series, allowing a total of eight hits, one run, one walk and striking out a playoff record 19 batters in 18 innings.

His dazzling performances have brought loud complaints from the bewildered Mets, who have claimed that Scott has been doctoring the ball — possibly with sandpaper — before delivering it.

Scott — and the Astros — have contended, however, that his split-fingered fastball, taught him by San Francisco Manager Roger Craig, has been mostly bothering the Mets' hitters.

"I think he could make a cue ball dance, but if he is defacing the ball, I'd like to see him stopped," Mets Manager Davey Johnson said.

Johnson claimed Scott keeps the sandpaper in his palm.

"He doesn't rotate the ball, he just makes a grinding motion," Johnson said. "It's blatant to me."

As attempted evidence against Scott's scuffing, the Mets collected 17 baseballs and put them in Johnson's desk.

"(The Mets) have 17 balls, I'll show you 30 balls (the Astros) say are scuffed by the Mets' pitchers," Harvey said. "It's funny the Mets never once asked to see a ball while it was still in play."

Harvey also said that he had umpired behind home plate while Scott was pitching "at least five times during the season" and in the opening playoff game, adding, "The man is just one hell of a pitcher."

"Are the Mets trying to get to his mind?" asked Harvey, who ejected pitcher Don Sutton in 1978 for allegedly scuffing baseballs during a game against St. Louis. "Possibly."

Houston Manager Hal Lanier made light of the Mets' dark assessment of Scott's pitches.

"Mike has never been convicted in a court of law," he said. "I heard the Mets were collecting Scott's baseballs. Who knows what could have happened once those balls got in the Mets' clubhouse?

"If the Mets are (such) big fans of Scott's, then they should bring them (the baseballs) over to Mike and he can autograph them."

Ray Knight, the Mets' third baseman and a former teammate of Scott's at Houston, said, "I've faced tougher pitchers in this league than Mike Scott. Every time you miss a pitch, you can't come back (to the dugout) and say, 'He cut it.'"

Keith Hernandez, the Mets' first baseman said, "I don't care what Scott is doing. If he's cutting it or scuffing it, you still have to hit it. Don't you?"

Tennis eligibility tabled for now

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) - Acting with uncharacteristic speed in hopes of increasing income and public interest, the International Olympic Committee voted Tuesday to end a 70-year tradition and hold the Winter Games in a separate year from the Summer Games.

But in an action more in keeping with its general policy of not rushing into things, the IOC adopted an eligibility proposal that left unanswered the key question of whether the world's top tennis players can compete for Olympic medals.

A plan that would have opened the 1988 Games to Ivan Lendl, Martina Navratilova and the rest of tennis' millionaire stars was shelved until at least the next IOC general meeting in Istanbul, Turkey, next May. Willi Daume, head of the committee's Eligibility Commission, said.

Less-drastic eligibility plans, most already in effect for world championships, were approved for four other sports by the IOC's 91st Session.

Professional soccer players from North America and Asia, and European and South American pros who have not competing in World Cup play, can play Olympic soccer in 1988, and all soccer professionals 23 years old and younger will be eligible beginning in 1992, Daume said.

Riders in equestrian jumping events will be eligible for the Games if the International Equestrian Federation gives them the go-ahead, Daume added.

And in agreeing with eligibility requirents for the respective world championships, he continued, the IOC said that track athletes who are professionals in other sports were eligible for Olympic track events, while pro ice hockey players could compete in the sport they pay for play in the Winter Games, beginning in 1988.

Those Winter Games in Calgary will be the next-to-last held in the same year as the Summer Games, under the quickly assembled change adopted at Tuesday's morning session.

Starting with 1994, the Winter Olympics will be held two years before the Summer Games. Since winter sports were added to the Olympic program in 1924, both sets of Games have been held in the same year.

So, this Friday will mark the last time the IOC picks host cities for Summer and Winter Games in the same year. The decision on a 1994 winter site probably will be made during the 1988 Olympics in Seoul, officials said.

The vote, at the IOC's 91st Session, was overwhelming and came just six weeks after officials of national Olympic committees and international sports federations were polled on the proposed split.

Traditionally a very deliberative body, the IOC this time was convinced to take the dramatic step quickly by a 1-2 punch of Soviet and American speeches and the lure of more money from future television contracts, Marc Hodler, an IOC member from Switzerland and head of the International Association of Winter Sports Federations, said.

"Never before in the history of the Olympics has such an idea been found so acceptable in such a short time," Hodler told a news conference.

The Executive Board last Saturday unanimously approved the change to Rule 5 of the Olympic Charter, setting up "a separate cycle of Winter Games."

And the proposal was taken to the full session by a powerful quintet: IOC President Juan Antonio Samaranch, who Holder said had originated the idea; administrator Raymond Gafner; Hodler; and delegates from the two most powerful national Olympic groups, Robert Helmick of the United States and Vitaly Smirnov of the Soviet Union.

Of 85 IOC members at the session, Hodler said, 78 voted in favor, five abstained and two opposed the change. Those voting against were identified by other Olympic officials as Jan Staubo of Norway and Kevan Gosper of Australia.

Hodler said the negative votes were based on a wait-and-see attitude that desired more time to study the matter. To wait, however, would have meant that no change could have been made until 1998, he said.

"We would have lost six years, and six years is a generation of athletes," Hodler said.

There was no opposition in the closed-door session to the basic argument for the move — to give the Winter Games more of an identity of their own — other officials said.

"The importance of winter sports has grown, and it is extremely difficult for some national Olympic committees to prepare for both Games," said Franco Carraro, an IOC member from Italy. "Spreading it over two years makes this task easier."

Hodler said it also should make it easier for television networks to pay for Olympic broadcasting rights.

"We know they have a predicament of having to buy both from the same operating budget," he said. "They will be in an easier position for bidding now that the Games are in different years."

Television income is the major source of money for the IOC, and signs recently have indicated that source might be drying up, particularly in the United States.

For 1988, ABC agreed to pay a record $309 million for U.S. rights to the Winter Games in Calgary. The Seoul organizers were hoping for a summer contract worth at least $750 million, but had to settle for an agreement with NBC containing a sliding scale that — depending on advertising revenue and ratings — could produce as little as one-third of that.

The decision brought some dissension from the IOC Athletes Commission, which said it was not consulted on the change. Hodler said they did not have to be.

"We feel the athletes really weren't concerned at all," he said. "Five of the six winter sports hold world championships every year, and the sixth (skiing) is held every two years, so there should be no break in their routine."

Another voice critical of the move was George Miller, secretary general of the U.S. Olympic Committee, who said he was upset over Helmick's reported strong support.

Miller said the plan could cause problems in fund-raising and sponsorship programs, on which the USOC depends for a majority of its working budget.

"No one has answered my questions about how we will handle this, and I think it should have been studied more," Miller said.

By The Associated Press

Miami, Alabama, Nebraska and Michigan retained the top four spots in The Associated Press college football poll Tuesday, while North Carolina and Southern Methodist joined the Top Twenty for the first time this season.

In addition, defending national champion Oklahoma climbed from sixth place to fifth.

Unbeaten Miami easily held on to the No. 1 spot for the third consecutive week, after routing West Virginia 58-14 last Saturday for its sixth victory. The Hurricanes received 56 of 59 first-place votes and 1,175 of a possible 1,180 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

Alabama, 6-0, collected two first-place votes and 1,099 points after trouncing Memphis State 37-0. Nebraska, 5-0, which beat Oklahoma State 30-10, got 1,018 points, and Michigan, 5-0, received 986 points after defeating Michigan State 27-7.

North Carolina, 4-0-1, moved among the elite at No. 18, after outscoring Wake Forest 40-30. SMU, 4-1, came in at No. 20, tied with Baylor, after upsetting the Bears 27-21.

Oklahoma, 4-1, moved from sixth to fifth with 946 points after a 47-12 rout over Texas.

Penn State, 5-0, received the other first-place vote, but dropped from fifth to sixth with 892 points after having to rally and beat Cincinnati 23-17.

Auburn, 5-0, remained No. 7 with 861 points after beating Vanderbilt 31-9, but Arkansas and Southern California, ranked eighth and ninth last week, suffered their first setbacks of the season and dropped into the Second Ten.

Iowa, 5-0, beat Wisconsin 17-6 and vaulted from 10th place to eighth with 753 points, while Washington, 4-1, a 24-14 winner over previously unbeaten Stanford, climbed from 12th to ninth with 676 points.

Arizona State, 4-0-1, No. 15 last week, rounded out the Top Ten with 619 points after trimming Oregon 37-17.

The Second Ten consisted of Texas A&M, Louisiana State, Mississippi State, Arkansas, Southern Cal, Arizona, Clemson, North Carolina and UCLA, with Baylor and Southern Methodist tied for 20th.

Last week, it was Arizona, Washington, Baylor, Texas A&M, Arizona State, LSU, North Carolina State, Stanford, Mississippi State and Clemson.

North Carolina State fell out of the rankings after a 59-21 defeat by Georgia Tech and Stanford's loss to Washington cost the Cardinal its spot in the Top Twenty.

UCLA came back after a one-week absence by handing previously unbeaten Arizona its first setback 32-25.

Big Sky honors players of week

BOISE (AP) — Runningbacks Charvez Foger from the University of Nevada-Reno and Sean Sanders from Weber State have been named Big Sky Conference offensive players of the week, while Boise State's free safety Maury Moore gets the nod on defense.

Foger, a sophomore fullback from Los Vegas, helped Nevada-Reno up its record to 6-0 on the season and protect its No. 1 ranking in NCAA Divison I-AA in the Wolf Pack's win over Stephen F. Austin, 34-27. In that game Foger gained 156 yards on 32 carries scoring three touchdown runs.

Sanders, a junior runningback from Bakersfield, Calif., lead Weber to a 24-3 Big Sky win over Montana State. Sanders had 164 yards rushing on 26 carries, a career high, and scored two touchdowns. He had 178 yards of all-purpose rushing for the game, averaging 6.3 yards per carry.

Moore, a senior free safety from Chico, Calif., guided Boise State to a 31-0 shutout of Montana. Moore had 10 tackles, three pass breakups and two of the Broncos' four pass interceptions as the BSU limited the Grizzlies to 137 yards total offense.

Nominated on the defense were Idaho State free safety Don Davis, Montana end Pat Foster, Montana State free safety Bob Kimball, Nevada-Reno linebacker Kent Donithan, Northern Arizona end David Smith and Weber State inside linebacker Joe Long.

Bears obtain rights to Flutie

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Bears have acquired the rights to Heisman Trophy quarterback Doug Flutie from the Los Angeles Rams for an unannounced future draft choice, Bears' General Manager Jerry Vainisi announced Tuesday.

"We did not give a high draft choice so we thought why not take a chance," said Vainisi. "We want to sign him to a 1987-88 contract and that would make him available this season if something happened to our quarterbacks.

"We were in competition with three or four other clubs," Vainisi added during a break in the NFL's owners' meeting.

"We more or less went back and sweetened it the offer before the trading deadline. We know he has the ability to be competitive and play football. The only knock against him is his height."

Flutie, who at 5-foot-9 has been considered too small to play in the National Football League, has said he wants a chance to prove himself and was delighted when he learned the undefeated Bears were interested in his services.

"I'm an anxious kind of kid, I don't like to sit still," said Flutie, who was in Boston when he heard the news. "But I realize the situation. I know Jim McMahon is the No. 1 quarterback."

Flutie, the 1984 Heisman Trophy winner out of Boston College, played in the United States Football League with the New Jersey Generals last year.

The Bears last week indicated they were interested in Flutie and said Monday that if they acquired him they would sign him to a 1987 contract so as not to disrupt their 45-man roster.

McMahon has been hampered by injuries through most of his career and is currently nursing a mild shoulder separation. McMahon is backed by Steve Fuller and Mike Tomczak.

Bears' Coach Mike Ditka said Monday that if the Bears did acquire Flutie he would be signed to a 1987 contract which would make him available this season in case of an emergency.

Flutie's agent, Bob Woolf, said the deal between the Bears and Rams, "went right down to the wire," referring to the NFL's 4 p.m. EDT trading deadline. "But we couldn't be more delighted. This is something Doug wanted very much.

"He's very thankful for the confidence Coach Ditka and the whole organization has shown in him," Woolf said in a telephone interview from his Boston office.

Woolf said he and Flutie planned to celebrate by taking in Tuesday night's American League baseball playoff contest between the California Angels and Boston Red Sox at Fenway Park.

Ditka talked about acquiring the rights to Flutie after the Green Bay Packers gave him a tryout. At Monday's weekly news conference, Ditka was asked again about Flutie, and he responded:

"We have a legitimate interest in Flutie. I'm interested in what he accomplished. He intrigues me. He's a winner."

Asked if Flutie could be used at any position other than quarterback, Ditka said, "No. He's a quarterback. Anything else would be far-fetched."

Woolf declined to discuss what negotiating stance he'd take in discussions with the Super Bowl chmapions, but said, "We don't expect any problems coming to an agreement.

"The club has been straightforward. We're so excited to be with the organization, we don't want to do anything to upset the unity of the club."

Asked about whether he expected Flutie to play for Chicago this season, Woolf said, "Doug is just happy to come in and learn what he can about the offense and see where we go from there."

Flutie added, "There is some question about whether it will be this year or next year, but right now I'm not concerned about it. I've been out for a long time.

"If necessary, I'll sit out. That will give me more of an opportunity to learn the system and get a head start on it all before I jump in the fire," he added.

As a senior in 1984, Flutie led Boston College to a 10-2 finish during the regular season, then capped it with a 45-28 win over Houston in the Cotton Bowl that left the Eagles ranked No. 8 nationally.

He finished his college career as the NCAA's all-time major college leader in total yards, with 11,074, and passing yards, with 10,579.

Surgery fixes McGee's knee

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Center fielder Willie McGee has undergone arthroscopic surgery to repair torn cartilage in his left knee and could be sidelined at the beginning of next season, the St. Louis Cardinals said Tuesday.

McGee, the National League's Most Valuable Player in 1985, underwent the surgery Monday afternoon to repair torn cartilage on the outside part of his left knee. The surgery was performed by a knee specialist in Michigan, the Cardinals said.

McGee, 27, will spend about a month in a cast, followed by three months with a protective wrap, team spokesman Kip Ingle said.

"When added up, the recovery period will likely be four months, which takes us to the beginning of March and the start of spring training," Ingle said.

McGee told KMOX Radio in St. Louis that it would take five months or more to be rehabilitated, causing him to be sidelined for at least part of the season. Spring training begins in late February and the season in April.

McGee, who batted .256 with seven home runs and 48 RBI in 124 games in 1986, said he had X-rays and other tests on the knee after the season and the specialist found the tear in the cartilage.

"It's all taken care of now," he said Tuesday. "Hopefully in the near future I can regain full strength and it will be 100 percent."

Cardinals team surgeon Dr. Stan London said McGee made the right decision by electing to undergo the surgery.

"It is better to repair than remove cartilage in this situation," he said. "The repair will take longer to heal, but in the long run the prognosis for full recovery is excellent."

McGee, without elaborating, said he first may have hurt the knee in a game earlier in the season against Montreal. He said that in the second to last game of the season against the Chicago Cubs, in rain-soaked Wrigley Field, he got in some mud as he dived for a ball and felt something in the knee pop.

McGee said he continued playing until he slid into second base later in the game and felt a sharp pain.

"It was a normal slide," he said. "I got up and it was very painful. So I took myself out of the game."

McGee, who missed 37 games of the season with hamstring injuries, said he was optimistic that he would recover fully.

"It's kind of a step by step thing," he said. "But he (the surgeon) stressed that you can't rush it. You've got to take it slow. I just want to get the thing right so I can get on with my career."

Davis Cuppers pull Paraguay

LONDON (AP) - The United States, which has not won the Davis Cup for four years, drew Paraguay away from home as its first-round opponent as pairings were made Tuesday for the 1987 men's team tennis competition.

"We don't know much about Paraguay but we're sure gonna find out," said Gordon Jorgensen, chairman of the U.S. Davis Cup committee after the draw in London.

"We've been to Latin America twice this year and barely got out alive. But there's plenty of incentive for us to win that first round match next year," he said.

All first-round matches in the 1987 World Group take place March 13-15. A victory over Paraguay would give the United States crucial home advantage for the second round and semifinals, regardless of the opposition.

The final is set for Dec. 18-20.

With John McEnroe expected to be in contention for a place on the U.S. team for the first time since the 1984 final when the Americans lost to Sweden, Jorgensen was confident the trophy could be heading back to America despite its recent slump in the world's major tennis tournaments.

"Our captain (Tom Gorman) has indicated he would seriously consider John McEnroe."

"I think we are going to be much stronger next year," said Jorgensen, vice president of the U.S. Tennis Association. "I'd love to get revenge for recent defeats by Sweden and Germany."

America last won the Davis Cup in 1982, beating France 4-1 in the final in Grenoble. Since then, it has lost to Argentina, Sweden and West Germany.

This year, after eliminating Ecuador and Mexico, the Americans went out in the semifinals to Australia.

If it beats Paraguay, the United States would be at home to Boris Becker and West Germany in round two of the 1987 series, provided the West Germans can conquer Spain first.

The Swedes, who have won the cup for the past two years and face Australia in Melbourne from Dec. 26-28 to decide the 1986 title, have an awkward first round trip to Italy next year.

If, as expected however, they get through, they would most likely take on France, which opens with a home meeting against unrated South Korea, back in the world group of the Davis Cup for the first time since 1981.

In the weaker bottom half of the draw, Australia opens with a home match against Yugoslavia, the winner to meet Mexico or Britain in round two.

The last two World Group pairings pit India against Argentina and Czechoslovakia, beaten by Sweden in this year's semifinals, against newcomer Israel. The Israelis are making their first appearance in the 16-nation world group.

A record entry of 72 nations were included in Tuesday's draw, compared with 71 last year. Two new nations, Djibouti and Cuba, have entered while Bolivia has returned for the first time in five years.

"Going Bald?"

Here's Help If Cause is Sebum

HOUSTON, Texas—If you have symptoms of "sebum" hair loss; oily or greasy forehead; dandruff, dry or oily; itchy scalp; and if your hair pulls out easily on top of your head, here's help.

A firm of laboratory consultants has developed a scientifically advanced formula and regimen to remove and control the continuous discharge of toxic sebum, so the scalp can function normally and effectively. This, in turn, greatly reduces hair loss...stimulates natural hair cell production...and reverses the balding process.

This scientific regimen has proven so successful the firm invites you to try it for 32 days, at their risk, and see for yourself.

These experts point out that the majority of cases of excessive hair fall and baldness are the beginning and more fully developed stages of male pattern baldness and cannot be helped.

But, if your hair loss is caused or effected by sebum, here is help.

Everyone has a full head of hair until some time after puberty. In the case of hair loss caused by "sebum", the problem starts when the male hormone production reaches its peak. This causes an excessive discharge of toxic sebum, which if not properly controlled, will gradually destroy the hair-producing cells on top of the head.

Hair loss caused by sebum can also run in your family, and, if you wait until you are slick bald and your hair-producing cells are destroyed, you are beyond help.

So, if you still have any hair on top of your head, and would like to reverse the balding process...now is the time to do something about it before it's too late.

Loesch Laboratory Consultants, Inc., will supply you with treatment for 32 days...at their risk...if you have the sebum symptoms and are not already slick bald. Just send them the information below. Or, call them toll-free at 1-800-231-7157 (in Texas 1-800-833-8387) 8:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m., Monday thru Thursday and they will send complete information. Pigeon sets young bird record

JACKPOT, Nev. — A young racing pigeon on it's first inter state flight flew non-stop from Jackpot, Nev., Sunday to its home loft in Camellia, Calif., averaging 55.2 miles per hour for a new "young bird" record.

The bird, named Jackpot, of course, is owned by Lamont Carr, a Sacramento dentist and member of the Camillia City Pigeon Racing Combine. The Sunday event was also the first for this group of pigeon advocates ever to be held in Jackpot, and according to the race director it constituted the longest such race ever held in the Pacific western region.

There were 450 birds released Sunday morning for the 400 mile event.

Donald Thorne of Rio Linda, Calif., was in charge of the release of the birds from their cages in trucks. The pigeons were taken to the top of a butte about five miles north of Jackpot and above the Rabbit Springs campground.

All 450 of the birds returned although some did not show up at their lifts for about two days. Thorne said to record atime, the bird must land on its own loft and enter, tripping a time mechanism. Some birds fly to the loft area and stop, but if they do not enter and trip the timer, the clock continues to run against them.

Thorne said the race from Jackpot has now been adopted by his group as an annual fall event to be known as the "Jackpot Special" race.

Pro baseball returns to Boise

The Boise Baseball Committee's year-old dream became reality Monday night when the Boise School Board voted unanimously to allow a Northwest League minor-league baseball team to use Borah High School's Wigle Field.

It was the final step in negotiations between the school district and Miami businessman Mal Fichman, who has an agreement to purchase the league's Tri-Cities (Wash.) Triplets.

The deal will be finalized in the next few weeks when the lease is signed and formally approved. Fichman and district athletic coordinator Jack Acree reached a verbal agreement on a lease late last week, leaving the school board to discuss beer sales at Wigle.

Before approving the lease, the board was assured that the law forbidding beer sales within 300 feet of a school would be enforced. Beer will have to be sold beyond the right-field line at Wigle Field if Fichman can't get the law waived when school is out.

Lloyd drops off tennis team

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd, the world's second-ranked women's tennis player and winner of more Wightman Cup matches than any U.S. player, Tuesday was forced to withdraw from this year's competition because of a knee injury.

In making the announcement, the U.S. Tennis Association said that Lloyd would be replaced on the American team by Stephanie Rehe of Highland, Calif. Rehe, ranked 13th in the world, joins Bonnie Gadusek, Kathy Rinaldi, Anne White and Elise Burgin on the American team that will face Britain in the Wightman Cup matches Oct. 30-Nov. 1 at Royal Albert Hall in London.

Since Lloyd first began playing in the Wightman Cup in 1971, she has missed only two years of competition, in 1974 and 1983. She is unbeaten in 26 singles matches and has an 8-4 record in doubles.

Lloyd was the captain of the U.S. team. The USTA said no new captain had yet been named.

Thornton undergoes surgery

Thornton, 37, had arthroscopic surgery on the knee in March 1985. The right-handed hitter had 13 home runs and 49 runs batted in when the knee and his back began to bother him at the All-Star break this season.

Dr. John Bergfeld, the club's orthopedic specialist, had hoped that only arthroscopic surgery would be needed again this year, but after an arthroscopic examination, he determined that a more serious operation was necessary.

Thornton, who has hit 253 home runs during his career, missed all of the 1980 season when he had surgery twice to remove torn cartilage from his right knee.

Martina seeks 1,000th win

FILDERSTADT, West Germany (AP) — Martina Navratilova, believing she has only 996 wins, seeks to become only the second woman tennis player to reach the mark of 1,000 victories when she meets Nathalie Tauziat of France at the Porsche Grand Prix tournament Wednesday.

"My own count says I have 996 victories, but the computer says 999 so I have to believe the computer," Navratilova said Tuesday after a practice session.

Navratilova, the world's top-ranked player, has scored 999 victories in professional tournaments since joining the circuit in 1973.

Only Navratilova's perennial rival, Chris Evert-Lloyd of the United States, has more victories — 1,143.

Autopsy report delayed

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The results of an autopsy on Shawn Akina, a University of Utah freshman quarterback who collapsed and died Saturday likely won't be released until late this week, says Wayne Shepherd, the school's police chief.

"We've asked them to expedite the results, but we don't expect them until late this week, possibly even early next week," said Shepherd Tuesday.

Shepherd said campus security officers had done a background check on Akina, including one to see if he had associated with anyone involved with drugs, but found him "to be a pretty good kid."

"We did a lot of checking," he said. "There's nothing suspect at all, but the toxicology reports will say for sure."

Akina, 19, a walk-on from Honolulu, collapsed as he stood up from a workout on weights, Shepherd said.

Authorities said that preliminary indications were that the 6-foot, 181-pound Akina died of an apparent heart attack.

Vincent may face surgery

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Forward Jay Vincent, acquired by the Washington Bullets in an offseason trade, may require surgery after jamming a finger on his right hand in the NBA team's first exhibition game.

X-rays taken Saturday, a day after the injury, didn't reveal any broken bones, but Vincent said there was no range of motion in the finger. A subsequent examination by a hand specialist disclosed a problem with a tendon in the hand.

With the possibility of Vincent being sidelined, the Bullets are expected to step up their efforts to reach agreement with rookie forward John Williams of Louisiana State, the team's No. 1 draft choice.

"It was obviously very important to have Williams before," said Coach Kevin Loughery, "but now it's even more important. The thing I'm most concerned about is the kind of shape he's in."

The Bullets also were reported to have reached agreement on a new contract with guard Frank Johnson on a one-year contract.

Unpredictability is new Bengal weapon

Wyche called for the fake punt by Jeff Hayes that surprised the Pittsburgh Steelers and sent the Bengals to a 24-22 victory Monday night at Riverfront Stadium.

Hayes took the fourth-down snap and took off for his left, tight-roping the sideline and sprinting 61 yards for his first NFL touchdown and a fourth-quarter lead the Bengals never gave up.

The touchdown made up for a blocked Hayes punt that set up Pittsburgh's first touchdown and a safety after a bad snap on another punt attempt.

As soon as the game ended, Wyche said he was taking flak for the trickery.

"One of the Pittsburgh players came off and said — I'll clean this up a little bit — 'Boy, that tees me off the way you guys won. What a cheap win, having to play like that.'

"Fellas, that's seven points. You better cover all your flanks in Pittsburgh," Wyche said.

Wyche's innovations in huddle formations and his penchant for unusual plays has been criticized as needless complications. Wyche said the decisive fake punt was an example of how unpredictability can be an advantage.

"We do so many screwed up things that I don't think Pittsburgh or anybody else knows what's coming next," Wyche said. "I know they say they do, but our no-huddle and our other things do work, regardless of what commentators say."

"Our containment people should have stopped it," Noll said. "They've used gadget plays every place except the kicking game. We should have expected it."

The Bengals are 4-2 and remain tied with the Cleveland Browns for first. Quarterback Boomer Esiason, who threw a pair of touchdown passes, said it's a little unusual to be a front-runner instead of trying to catch other teams after a slow start.

"I haven't really thought about it," Esiason said. "I don't go to bed at night thinking, 'Wow, I'm a front-runner all of a sudden.' That doesn't sit in the back of my mind, but it's true. It would be a good thing to get used to, wouldn't it?"

The 1-5 Steelers aren't enjoying their unaccustomed familiarity with losing. The loss Monday night gave them their worst start since 1969, when they went 1-13 in Noll's first season as head coach.

"I haven't thought about it," center Mike Webster said. "There may be disappointment in this lockerroom for everybody, but the only way to get out of it is to work your way out of it."

Noll was forced to use untested rookie quarterback Bubby Brister because Mark Malone's sprained right thumb interfered with his throwing. Brister, a third-round draft choice playing his first regular-season game, completed 12 of 33 passes for 191 yards without an interception. He teamed with Calvin Sweeney on a 58-yard pass play in the first quarter, the longest by the Steelers this season, and completed three of four tosses for 40 yards to fuel a second-half touchdown drive.

Noll said it's too soon to tell whether Brister will play again next week. Wyche said he was impressed by the rookie, who had plays taped to his left forearm to help smooth his debut.

"Bubby Brister, he's their future, I think," Wyche said. "He's a tremendous looking player. He missed on a couple of passes out there that I think experience will fix for him. Brister is a poised young quarterback. He's going to be good."

Rozelle reinstates Raider suspension

NEW YORK (AP) — Los Angeles Raiders defensive end Greg Townsend will be suspended for Sunday's game against the Miami Dolphins and quarterback Dan Marino, NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle announced Monday.

"I was sure that the new evidence we showed them (NFL officials) last Friday convinced them that I was provoked and didn't warrant a suspension," Townsend said at the Raiders' El Segundo, Calif., headquarters. "Not the week we play Dan Marino."

Many consider Marino to have the quickest release of any passer in the league. Townsend, in his fourth year with the Raiders, is a pass rush specialist.

"I have again reviewed the evidence, including additional videotape provided at the hearing in Los Angeles last Friday, and Greg Townsend's version of the events in question," Rozelle said in a statement.

"Having done so, my final determination is that Townsend ... will be suspended without pay for the Raiders' next game, Oct. 19 versus Miami."

"I'm at a loss for words," Coach Tom Flores of the Raiders said Monday at the team headquarters. "I'm just stunned. Why now ... why this kid ... why this situation? It makes no sense."

Townsend, 25, originally was given a one-game suspension last week. But the NFL reversed itself following a hearing and temporarily rescinded the suspension, allowing the defensive end to play Sunday against the Seattle Seahawks.

"We thought this was behind us and that he would be fined, much like a lot of other participants in what happened at Kansas City," Flores said. "We don't condone what happened, but punishing him with a suspension does not fit the acts committed, either."

Salvadorans fight to restore nation

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — "Our house? It fell," Graciela de Martinez, a hotel maid, said Tuesday with a shrug of acceptance. "But the family is well, thank God . . . We are optimistic."

For those who lived through Friday's devastating earthquake, Tuesday was another day of surviving, often without such basics as beans and rice.

The stench of death filled the streets, under a hot sun. Unrecovered bodies lay under scores of buildings reduced to rubble. Hundreds of aftershocks reminded jittery residents of the killer earthquake that struck their capital and left sections of this city of 800,000 looking like a war zone.

But — Salvadorans — hardened — by seven years of civil war and accustomed to making do, looked to the future.

Even the nearly 1,100 aftershocks since the quake, including 200 that rumbled beneath the city Monday, did not deter them. They buried their dead and tried to rebuild their lives.

Many admitted they were nervous, but accepted their fate, hoped for better days, and fell back on a strong religious faith.

"It is the same situation. Only God knows for sure, but we have confidence in Him. What more can we do," said Argentina de Hernandez after one aftershock.

Duarte told this Central American nation in a televised news conference Monday night that 25 planeloads of help had arrived from governments and private organizations throughout the world — field hospitals, technicians, medical supplies and teams, food, temporary shelters, clothing.

Duarte said 2,379 homes were leveled and 30,988 families forced into the streets because their homes were too damaged to use.

One rough estimate was that nearly 200,000 residents may be homeless in San Salvador. Some people simply strung hammocks between trees to have a place to sleep.

"Goodwill is not enough," the president said. "We still have thousands on the streets. We ask the international community to help us."

The government television channel throughout the morning broadcast appeals for aid and read the names of survivors so family members would know their fate.

The government labored to distribute food, clothing and materials for shelters, but Duarte said a great deal more was needed.

At the Rubin Dario building, said to be the hardest hit, the hunt for survivors kept on, buoyed by the rescue there Monday of two women and a man. The three had survived in the tons of rubble that once was a five-story building housing offices and stores in the center of the capital.

Workers wore surgical masks or handerchiefs over the faces, against the odor and to guard against disease.

The overpowering smell confused specially trained dogs sniffing for survivors, their handlers said, preventing the dogs from knowing which direction to go in their search.

In the devastated, working-class San Jacinto neighborhood, Swiss rescuers with dogs methodically searched an area where many homes lay under up to 18 feet of sand and dirt that slid into the ravine.

Many stores remained closed, either because of structural damage, lack of water and electricity, or because the owners are not there to open the doors.

U.S. official sources have put the number of Americans killed at three, including Harry Jacobson, 73, originally from Racine, Wis., and two people with dual U.S. and Salvadoran citizenship, who lived in San Salvador.

Jacobson owned the Gran Hotel San Salvador. Rescuers said he died in the wreckage of that building.

New Ireland area hit by earthquake

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Geological Survey reported Tuesday that a strong earthquake had occurred in the New Ireland island area of Papua, New Guinea.

The tremor was recorded at a preliminary magnitude of 6.9 on the Richter scale, according to scientists at the USGS Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo.

The epicenter of the earthquake was about 550 miles north of Port Moresby, the capital of Papua, New Guinea, and about 1,500 miles northeast of Brisbane, Australia. The tremor occurred at 2:53 a.m. Wednesday local time, about 10:53 a.m. MDT Tuesday.

There was no immediate word on whether land or populated areas sustained any damage from the quake.

Queen, Deng meet at lunch

PEKING (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II had lunch with supreme leader Deng Xiaoping and strolled atop the Great Wall on Tuesday, the second day of the only visit a reigning British monarch has ever paid to China.

Communist Party chief Hu Yaobang showed her around the residential area of senior leaders and Premier Zhao Ziyang called on her at the ornate villa where she is staying.

In the afternoon, Elizabeth climbed onto the 3,700-mile-long wall built by ancient emperors to keep foreigners out.

She hiked along a restored section at Badaling, a rugged, mountainous area 37 miles north of Peking, and took several photographs, the official news agency Xinhua reported.

It quoted her as saying the 2,000-year-old structure was the most fantastic of the many wonders she has visited.

Pigeon sets young bird record

JACKPOT, Nev. — A young racing pigeon on it's first inter state flight flew non-stop from Jackpot, Nev., Sunday to its home loft in Camlellia, Calif., averaging 55.2 miles per hour for a new "young bird" record.

The bird, named Jackpot, of course, is owned by Lamont Carr, a Sacramento dentist and member of the Camillia City Pigeon Racing Combine. The Sunday event was also the first for this group of pigeon advocates ever to be held in Jackpot, and according to the race director it constituted the longest such race ever held in the Pacific western region.

There were 450 birds released Sunday morning for the 400 mile event.

Donald Thorne of Rio Linda, Calif., was in charge of the release of the birds from their cages in trucks. The pigeons were taken to the top of a butte about five miles north of Jackpot and above the Rabbit Springs campground.

All 450 of the birds returned although some did not show up at their lifts for about two days. Thorne said to record atime, the bird must land on its own loft and enter, tripping a time mechanism. Some birds fly to the loft area and stop, but if they do not enter and trip the timer, the clock continues to run against them.

Thorne said the race from Jackpot has now been adopted by his group as an annual fall event to be known as the "Jackpot Special" race.

Pro baseball returns to Boise

The Boise Baseball Committee's year-old dream became reality Monday night when the Boise School Board voted unanimously to allow a Northwest League minor-league baseball team to use Borah High School's Wigle Field.

It was the final step in negotiations between the school district and Miami businessman Mal Fichman, who has an agreement to purchase the league's Tri-Cities (Wash.) Triplets.

The deal will be finalized in the next few weeks when the lease is signed and formally approved. Fichman and district athletic coordinator Jack Acree reached a verbal agreement on a lease late last week, leaving the school board to discuss beer sales at Wigle.

Before approving the lease, the board was assured that the law forbidding beer sales within 300 feet of a school would be enforced. Beer will have to be sold beyond the right-field line at Wigle Field if Fichman can't get the law waived when school is out.

Lloyd drops off tennis team

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd, the world's second-ranked women's tennis player and winner of more Wightman Cup matches than any U.S. player, Tuesday was forced to withdraw from this year's competition because of a knee injury.

In making the announcement, the U.S. Tennis Association said that Lloyd would be replaced on the American team by Stephanie Rehe of Highland, Calif. Rehe, ranked 13th in the world, joins Bonnie Gadusek, Kathy Rinaldi, Anne White and Elise Burgin on the American team that will face Britain in the Wightman Cup matches Oct. 30-Nov. 1 at Royal Albert Hall in London.

Since Lloyd first began playing in the Wightman Cup in 1971, she has missed only two years of competition, in 1974 and 1983. She is unbeaten in 26 singles matches and has an 8-4 record in doubles.

Lloyd was the captain of the U.S. team. The USTA said no new captain had yet been named.

Thornton undergoes surgery

Thornton, 37, had arthroscopic surgery on the knee in March 1985. The right-handed-hitter had 13 home runs and 49 runs batted in when the knee and his back began to bother him at the All-Star break this season.

Dr. John Bergfeld, the club's orthopedic specialist, had hoped that only arthroscopic surgery would be needed again this year, but after an arthroscopic examination, he determined that a more serious operation was necessary.

Thornton, who has hit 253 home runs during his career, missed all of the 1980 season when he had surgery twice to remove torn cartilage from his right knee.

Martina seeks 1,000th win

FILDERSTADT, West Germany (AP) — Martina Navratilova, believing she has only 996 wins, seeks to become only the second woman tennis player to reach the mark of 1,000 victories when she meets Nathalie Tauziat of France at the Porsche Grand Prix tournament Wednesday.

"My own count says I have 996 victories, but the computer says 999 so I have to believe the computer," Navratilova said Tuesday after a practice session.

Navratilova, the world's top-ranked player, has scored 999 victories in professional tournaments since joining the circuit in 1973.

Only Navratilova's perennial rival, Chris Evert-Lloyd of the United States, has more victories — 1,143.

Autopsy report delayed

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The results of an autopsy on Shawn Akina, a University of Utah freshman quarterback who collapsed and died Saturday likely won't be released until late this week, says Wayne Shepherd, the school's police chief.

"We've asked them to expedite the results, but we don't expect them until late this week, possibly even early next week," said Shepherd Tuesday.

Shepherd said campus security officers had done a background check on Akina, including one to see if he had associated with anyone involved with drugs, but found him "to be a pretty good kid."

"We did a lot of checking," he said. "There's nothing suspect at all, but the toxicology reports will say for sure."

Akina, 19, a walk-on from Honolulu, collapsed as he stood up from a workout on weights, Shepherd said.

Authorities said that preliminary indications were that the 6-foot, 181-pound Akina died of an apparent heart attack.

Vincent may face surgery

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Forward Jay Vincent, acquired by the Washington Bullets in an offseason trade, may require surgery after jamming a finger on his right hand in the NBA team's first exhibition game.

X-rays taken Saturday, a day after the injury, didn't reveal any broken bones, but Vincent said there was no range of motion in the finger. A subsequent examination by a hand specialist disclosed a problem with a tendon in the hand.

With the possibility of Vincent being sidelined, the Bullets are expected to step up their efforts to reach agreement with rookie forward John Williams of Louisiana State, the team's No. 1 draft choice.

"It was obviously very important to have Williams before," said Coach Kevin Loughery, "but now it's even more important. The thing I'm most concerned about is the kind of shape he's in."

The Bullets also were reported to have reached agreement on a new contract with guard Frank Johnson on a one-year contract.

Wyche called for the fake punt by Jeff Hayes that surprised the Pittsburgh Steelers and sent the Bengals to a 24-22 victory Monday night at Riverfront Stadium.

Hayes took the fourth-down snap and took off for his left, tight-roping the sideline and sprinting 61 yards for his first NFL touchdown and a fourth-quarter lead the Bengals never gave up.

The touchdown made up for a blocked Hayes punt that set up Pittsburgh's first touchdown and a safety after a bad snap on another punt attempt.

As soon as the game ended, Wyche said he was taking flak for the trickery.

"One of the Pittsburgh players came off and said — I'll clean this up a little bit — 'Boy, that tees me off the way you guys won. What a cheap win, having to play like that.'

"Fellas, that's seven points. You better cover all your flanks in Pittsburgh," Wyche said.

Wyche's innovations in huddle formations and his penchant for unusual plays has been criticized as needless complications. Wyche said the decisive fake punt was an example of how unpredictability can be an advantage.

"We do so many screwed up things that I don't think Pittsburgh or anybody else knows what's coming next," Wyche said. "I know they say they do, but our no-huddle and our other things do work, regardless of what commentators say."

"Our containment people should have stopped it," Noll said. "They've used gadget plays every place except the kicking game. We should have expected it."

The Bengals are 4-2 and remain tied with the Cleveland Browns for first. Quarterback Boomer Esiason, who threw a pair of touchdown passes, said it's a little unusual to be a front-runner instead of trying to catch other teams after a slow start.

"I haven't really thought about it," Esiason said. "I don't go to bed at night thinking, 'Wow, I'm a front-runner all of a sudden.' That doesn't sit in the back of my mind, but it's true. It would be a good thing to get used to, wouldn't it?"

The 1-5 Steelers aren't enjoying their unaccustomed familiarity with losing. The loss Monday night gave them their worst start since 1969, when they went 1-13 in Noll's first season as head coach.

"I haven't thought about it," center Mike Webster said. "There may be disappointment in this lockerroom for everybody, but the only way to get out of it is to work your way out of it."

Noll was forced to use untested rookie quarterback Bubby Brister because Mark Malone's sprained right thumb interfered with his throwing. Brister, a third-round draft choice playing his first regular-season game, completed 12 of 33 passes for 191 yards without an interception. He teamed with Calvin Sweeney on a 58-yard pass play in the first quarter, the longest by the Steelers this season, and completed three of four tosses for 40 yards to fuel a second-half touchdown drive.

Noll said it's too soon to tell whether Brister will play again next week. Wyche said he was impressed by the rookie, who had plays taped to his left forearm to help smooth his debut.

"Bubby Brister, he's their future, I think," Wyche said. "He's a tremendous looking player. He missed on a couple of passes out there that I think experience will fix for him. Brister is a poised young quarterback. He's going to be good."

Rozelle reinstates Raider suspension

NEW YORK (AP) — Los Angeles Raiders defensive end Greg Townsend will be suspended for Sunday's game against the Miami Dolphins and quarterback Dan Marino, NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle announced Monday.

"I was sure that the new evidence we showed them (NFL officials) last Friday convinced them that I was provoked and didn't warrant a suspension," Townsend said at the Raiders' El Segundo, Calif., headquarters. "Not the week we play Dan Marino."

Many consider Marino to have the quickest release of any passer in the league. Townsend, in his fourth year with the Raiders, is a pass rush specialist.

"I have again reviewed the evidence, including additional videotape provided at the hearing in Los Angeles last Friday, and Greg Townsend's version of the events in question," Rozelle said in a statement.

"Having done so, my final determination is that Townsend ... will be suspended without pay for the Raiders' next game, Oct. 19 versus Miami."

"I'm at a loss for words," Coach Tom Flores of the Raiders said Monday at the team headquarters. "I'm just stunned. Why now ... why this kid ... why this situation? It makes no sense."

Townsend, 25, originally was given a one-game suspension last week. But the NFL reversed itself following a hearing and temporarily rescinded the suspension, allowing the defensive end to play Sunday against the Seattle Seahawks.

"We thought this was behind us and that he would be fined, much like a lot of other participants in what happened at Kansas City," Flores said. "We don't condone what happened, but punishing him with a suspension does not fit the acts committed, either."

Salvadorans fight to restore nation

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — "Our house? It fell," Graciela de Martinez, a hotel maid, said Tuesday with a shrug of acceptance. "But the family is well, thank God — We are optimistic."

For those who lived through Friday's devastating earthquake, Tuesday was another day of surviving, often without such basics as beans and rice.

The stench of death filled the streets, under a hot sun. Unrecovered bodies lay under scores of buildings reduced to rubble. Hundreds of aftershocks reminded jittery residents of the killer earthquake that struck their capital and left sections of this city of 800,000 looking like a war zone.

But Salvadorans, hardened by seven years of civil war and accustomed to making do, looked to the future.

Even the nearly 1,100 aftershocks since the quake, including 200 that rumbled beneath the city Monday, did not deter them. They buried their dead and tried to rebuild their lives.

Many admitted they were nervous, but accepted their fate, hoped for better days, and fell back on a strong religious faith.

"It is the same situation. Only God knows for sure, but we have confidence in Him. What more can we do," said Argentina de Hernandez after one aftershock.

Duarte told this Central American nation in a televised news conference Monday night that 25 planeloads of help had arrived from governments and private organizations throughout the world — field hospitals, technicians, medical supplies and teams, food, temporary shelters, clothing.

Duarte said 2,379 homes were leveled and 30,988 families forced into the streets because their homes were too damaged to use.

One rough estimate was that nearly 200,000 residents may be homeless in San Salvador. Some people simply strung hammocks between trees to have a place to sleep.

"Goodwill is not enough," the president said. "We still have thousands on the streets. We ask the international community to help us."

The government television channel throughout the morning broadcast appeals for aid and read the names of survivors so family members would know their fate.

The government labored to distribute food, clothing and materials for shelters, but Duarte said a great deal more was needed.

At the Rubin Dario building, said to be the hardest hit, the hunt for survivors kept on, buoyed by the rescue there Monday of two women and a man. The three had survived in the tons of rubble that once was a five-story building housing offices and stores in the center of the capital.

Workers wore surgical masks or handerchiefs over the faces, against the odor and to guard against disease.

The overpowering smell confused specially trained dogs sniffing for survivors, their handlers said, preventing the dogs from knowing which direction to go in their search.

In the devastated, working-class San Jacinto neighborhood, Swiss rescuers with dogs methodically searched an area where many homes lay under up to 18 feet of sand and dirt that slid into the ravine.

Many stores remained closed, either because of structural damage, lack of water and electricity, or because the owners are not there to open the doors.

U.S. official sources have put the number of Americans killed at three, including Harry Jacobson, 73, originally from Racine, Wis., and two people with dual U.S. and Salvadoran citizenship, who lived in San Salvador.

Jacobson owned the Gran Hotel San Salvador. Rescuers said he died in the wreckage of that building.

New Ireland area hit by earthquake

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Geological Survey reported Tuesday that a strong earthquake had occurred in the New Ireland island area of Papua, New Guinea.

The tremor was recorded at a preliminary magnitude of 6.9 on the Richter scale, according to scientists at the USGS Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo.

The epicenter of the earthquake was about 550 miles north of Port Moresby, the capital of Papua, New Guinea, and about 1,500 miles northeast of Brisbane, Australia. The tremor occurred at 2:53 a.m. Wednesday local time, about 10:53 a.m. MDT Tuesday.

There was no immediate word on whether land or populated areas sustained any damage from the quake.

House, Senate conferees agree at last on immigration bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate conferees reached agreement on a sweeping immigration bill Tuesday, after locking out dozens of lobbyists whose pressures have deadlocked similar legislation for years.

Agreement was announced after 5½ hours of private horse-trading, during which the House gave up 43 provisions from its immigration bill and the Senate dropped 48 provisions in its version.

The centerpiece of the bill remains an amnesty program for long-term illegal aliens and a system of fines against employers who knowingly hire undocumented workers.

Lawmakers said that by drying up job opportunities, they hoped to stop the flow of illegal aliens — 1.8 million of whom have been caught in the last year.

The conference agreement now goes to both houses. Chief Senate conferee Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., asked House members to "assist me in crushing knuckles" in his own chamber, where "one or two senators could stall" the bill.

The House Rules Committee promptly cleared the legislation for a House vote, which could take place Wednesday.

Conferees said they would push hard to pass an immigration bill in the closing days of the 99th Congress after years of failure, mindful this might be their last chance. Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., predicted that any future attempts would be doomed by a backlash against the amnesty program.

Agreements were reached on employer sanctions, civil rights protections for Hispanics, the amnesty qualification date, reimbursements to state and local governments for providing benefits to amnesty applicants and free legal services for some agricultural workers.

But conferees said the most emotional private debate came over a House provision that would have temporarily stopped deportations of illegal aliens from El Salvador and Nicaragua, until a study showed the conditions they would face back home.

The Reagan administration had threatened to veto the bill if that language was retained. As a result, the conference agreed to continue the current system, where deportion is considered on a case-by-case basis.

Commissioner Alan Nelson of the Immigration and Naturalization Service said that overall, the bill appeared acceptable now that the El Salvador-Nicaragua language was removed.

Rep. Joe Moakley, D-Mass., author of the language to delay deportations to El Salvador and Nicaragua, said he gave up because "I felt I should not be the one to bring down the bill. I will be back next year."

The conferees accepted House language that would make illegal aliens who came here before 1982 eligible for the amnesty program. The Senate plan to delay amnesty for up to three years was dropped.

The House, on the other hand, dropped its proposal — pushed by Hispanic lawmakers — to end employer sanctions after 6½ years unless Congress extended them.

But the Hispanics won a round when the conference retained House language to ban employment discrimination based on national origin or citizenship status, and to establish a special counsel in the Justice Department to enforce the protections.

However, the triumph was tempered when conferees agreed that the new protections could end after three years if found to cause undue harm to employers. Likewise, the negotiators accepted Senate language that could end the employer sanctions in three years if they were found to cause widespread discrimination.

Provisions to give legal status to hundreds of thousands of foreigners who harvest perishable fruits and vegetables were left in the bill. An agreement on the language was worked out previously.

Serious crime report rise biggest in 6 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of serious crimes reported to police rose 8 percent in the first half of 1986, the biggest increase in six years, the FBI reported Tuesday.

Criminologists linked the upward movement to more frequent reporting of crimes to police by victims, population trends and possibly to drug use.

The index of eight major offenses showed that violent crime, led by a 14 percent jump in aggravated assaults, rose 12 percent from the first six months of 1985. Property crimes were up 7 percent.

Crime rose in all regions of the United States, especially in the South and West, up 13 percent and 6 percent, respectively. This was a reflection of population migration from other parts of the country. The FBI's crime index rose 5 percent in the Northeast and 4 percent in the Midwest.

"Overall increases were recorded universally throughout the nation," FBI director William Webster said in a statement.

"Upswings were evident . . . in cities of all sizes and counties, both suburban and rural," Webster added.

The latest increase is the largest since the first half of 1980, when the FBI's crime index went up 10 percent.

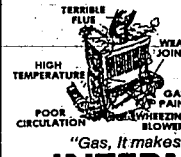

The number of crimes reported to police rose 12 percent in cities of 250,000 to 500,000 population. Crime was up 9 percent in suburbs and up 3 percent in rural areas.

Nationally, robberies and motor vehicle thefts rose 11 percent, while murder and burglary were up 8 percent. Larceny rose 7 percent, rape 2 percent and arson 1 percent.

The amount of major crime reported to police has been on the increase for the past 18 months, according to the FBI.

The Justice Department's Bureau of Justice Statistics says reporting rates for aggravated assault rose by six percentage points from 1973 to 1985 and that reporting of rape went up by 12 percentage points in that time.

Wrangle delays Israeli ministers' swap

JERUSALEM (AP) — Wrangling over political appointees delayed the long-planned job swap Tuesday between Prime Minister Shimon Peres and Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir.

The two leaders failed to resolve their differences at a 45-minute meeting, and it was unclear when they would go through with their agreement to rotate positions.

Shamir had been scheduled to present his Cabinet to Parliament and be sworn in as Israel's ninth prime minister. He was to hand over the foreign ministry to Peres in keeping with a September 1984 accord which followed an electoral stalemate leaving each party too weak to govern without the other.

Shamir told reporters there had been "no change" in the rival parties' positions as he emerged from the session at the prime minister's office. He declined further comment but said he planned to meet with Likud ministers Tuesday night.

Uzi Bar-Am, secretary general of Peres' left-leaning Labor Party, told reporters at a news conference his party was "committed to rotation." But he accused Likud of "bad faith" in negotiations about the government appointments.

"The rotation is in a state of crisis. The Likud is certain that on the eve of rotation it can subjugate Labor," Bar-Am said. He added that Peres had been trying "for weeks" to straighten out differences between the two camps.

Officials in both parties said the central dispute was over Labor's demand that a chief aide to Peres be named ambassador to Washington, in exchange for meeting Likud's demand to reinstate an outspoken former Likud minister whom Peres fired from the Cabinet.

The current ambassador, Meir Rosenne, was appointed by Likud's former Prime Minister Menachem Begin in 1983.

Court orders pair set free to save talks

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The Supreme Court on Tuesday ordered the release of the wife and bodyguard of Rodolfo Salas, the nation's top communist.

A Cabinet minister said President Corazon Aquino personally authorized the move to save peace talks with the rebels.

Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile, meanwhile, said the Philippines may have to seek the help of "foreign friends" to defeat the communist insurgency if it is not curbed in the next few years.

The high court ordered Josefina Cruz and Jose Concepcion released after Solicitor General Sedrey Ordonez told a hearing the government agreed to the move.

Defense lawyer Romeo Capulong said he was withdrawing his petition for the release of Salas, said to be chief of the New People's Army and chairman of the Communist Party of the Philippines.

The communist-backed National Democratic Front, which has been negotiating with the Aquino government since August, demanded that all three be freed if talks on ending the 17-year rebellion were to continue.

Military intelligence agents arrested Salas, his wife and Concepcion on Sept. 29 in front of a Manila hospital and charged them with rebellion, a capital offense. Charges against Ms. Cruz and Concepcion were not dropped, and Capulong guaranteed they would appear for any judicial proceedings.

U.S. to join in maneuvers

HAIFA, Israel (AP) — The commander of the 6th Fleet said Tuesday the American and Israeli navies will hold joint exercises in the Mediterranean this month, including anti-submarine maneuvers.

"The United States is very anxious to increase cooperation with Israel. We all learn from it," said Vice Adm. Kendell Maranville.

Israeli and U.S. vessels conducted their first joint maneuvers in 1984 in what was then seen as a boost for U.S.-Israeli relations. In September and October, aircraft and ships of the 6th Fleet took part in an unsuccessful search for the Dakar, an Israeli submarine which disappeared in the eastern Mediterranean in 1968.

Maranville arrived here aboard the flagship Belknap, a guided missile cruiser which is the first of several 6th Fleet vessels due for port call. The aircraft carrier Kennedy, the nuclear-powered guided missile cruiser Bainbridge and the supply ship Savannah are due later this week.

Dow battles downward push

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market managed to close on the upside Tuesday, despite downward pressure that wiped out most of its daylong gains.

Analysts said a selloff in the bond futures market, together with concerns about events at the OPEC meeting in Geneva and another drop in the price of International Business Machines stock, combined to put a damper on prices.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up by nearly 8.84 points in late morning, was losing more than 4 points near the close before it recovered to post a gain of 1.83 for the day, at 1800.20.

Traditional market-leader IBM, which lost $1.62½ cents per share Monday after announcing that its third-quarter earnings fell by 27 percent, compared with the third quarter of 1985, slipped $1.12½ a share Tuesday, closing at 120⅛.

Following the afternoon fire, a rumor swept markets that the government's report on September retail sales, scheduled for release Wednesday, would show a sharp increase, analysts said.

That sent bond futures tumbling, since it indicated that the economy may be strengthening and that there would me no more interest rate cuts — or that interest rates may even rise.

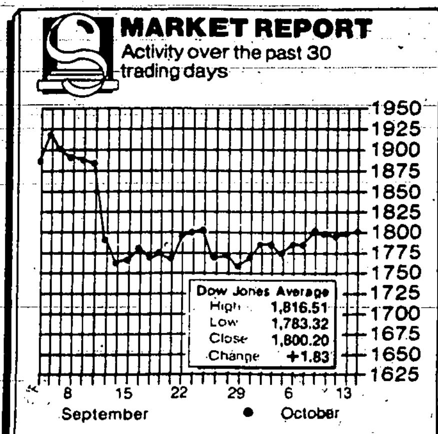

Higher interest rates are bad for stocks, since they mean companies must pay more to borrow money.

Burroughs was down 1 at 69⅛, while Honeywell Inc., which today said its profit fell nearly 42 percent, closed at 66½, down 1.

Chase Manhattan was down ⅜ at 36, after saying its third-quarter earnings fell 7.4 percent; J.P. Morgan & Co lost ⅜, to 83½. It reported flat earnings. BankAmerica Corp. was down ⅛ at 13⅜.

Among airlines, AMR Corp. was up ⅜ at 60⅞; Delta Airlines was up 1¼, at 49⅜; Pan Am was up ⅛ at 5⅞; and UAL Inc. was up ½ at 58¼.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regonal exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 138.446 million shares.

Strike cuts earnings for Boise Cascade

BOISE (AP) — Boise Cascade Corp., hard-hit by an 11-week strike at its Rumford, Maine, pulp and paper mill, reported a dramatic decline in third quarter earnings Tuesday.

The Boise-based wood products company said net income for the July-September period dropped below $13.3 million, or 38 cents per share of common stock. That compared to second quarter earnings of $31.3 million and net income in the third quarter of 1985 of $20.3 million.

Compounding problems for the rest of the year, the company said, was an anticipated $11 million increase in 1986 tax liability because of changes called for in the new tax bill passed by Congress this fall.

Chairman John Fery said the Maine strike, which ended with a settlement in mid-September, cost the company $30 million before taxes. Lost production during the walkout was estimated at 47,000 tons.

"The new labor contract, however, will enable that mill to operate more productively and efficiently in the future by providing flexibility in scheduling and assigning work," Fery said in a statement.

Improved prices and strong demand for uncoated white papers somewhat offset the strike's impact, Fery said, and total corporate operating income for the quarter was off only $7 million from the same period a year earlier on sales of nearly $960 million. While operating income from the paper division was down over $12 million, income from wood products was up over $10 million and income from packaging and office products rose nearly $800,000. Joint venture losses were up by $5.5 million from the same quarter last year.

For the nine-month period that ended Sept. 30, the company reported net income of $69.6 million, down from $85.3 million for the same period a year earlier. Overall operating income dipped below $190.3 million from over $206 million a year earlier as the paper segment saw income dropped by more than 25 percent while packaging and office products remained stable and wood products doubled.

Although packaging performed weakly due to higher linerboard costs, Fery credited the robust showing of the wood products segment to the corporation's year-old austerity program and restructuring efforts.

In addition, he said, "hourly union workers at the company's Northwest wood products manufacturing facilities accepted lower wages and benefits, thereby making compensation costs at those facilities competitive with the costs of similar operations in the area."

But while improving trends in the paper business and settlements of labor problems should bolster the company's performance in the current quarter, Fery said year-end earnings will be adversely affected by the anticipated $11 million increase in Boise Cascade's income tax provisions because of the sweeping federal tax overhaul.

Airline cuts Spokane flight

BOISE (AP) — Alaska Airlines will halt service between Boise and Spokane on Oct. 26, the same day it begins two non-stop flights between Boise and Portland, an airline spokesman said.

The Spokane flights, which leave Boise at 6:45 a.m. Monday through Sunday, terminate in Seattle. The route will be replaced with flights that leave at 6:40 a.m. Monday through Saturday and arrive in Seattle 15 minutes earlier after first stopping in Portland, spokesman Lou Cancelmi said.

He said the Spokane route was being dropped because the airline only has a limited number of planes and one gate in Boise. Moreover, research indicated that Portland was a preferred destination for Boise-area fliers.

Loss of Alaska Airlines service to Spokane leaves only one carrier, Horizon Airlines, providing daily flights to the eastern Washington city. Horizon flies to Spokane up to four times a day with propeller and jet aircraft.

Continental Illinois Bank, Isuzu score big

Ad spoofs turn out hit commercials

NEW YORK (AP) — A smooth-talking car salesman assures you in a recent commercial that Isuzu dealers are selling cars for $9 and will throw in a house if you act quickly.

But a caption blinks, "He's lying."

In another commercial, a pitchman for Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. urges viewers to call in for loan applications "now while a stupid commercial is on." He then grabs a baton and twirls it for the last half of the ad as a toll-free telephone number appears on the screen.

The commercials poke fun at advertising. But their sponsors say the tongue-in-cheek approach is also achieving a more serious mission — elevating the messages above the chorus of their competitors.

The "Liar" commercials for American Isuzu Motors Inc., the Whittier, Calif.-based subsidiary of Isuzu Motors Ltd. of Tokyo, have been running in various regions of the country since July and are credited with helping Isuzu to its second best sales month ever in September.

"And Isuzu dealers have millions in stock, so they are selling them for $9," the salesman says without a flicker of insincerity.

"House not included," the caption says.

In another Isuzu commercial, the salesman says he has brought along a Supreme Court justice to verify his claims. "He's lying," the caption says. "That's his cousin."

Isuzu expects to sell about 120,000 cars in the United States this year, up from 103,000 in 1985, said Fritz Kern, the company's vice president of marketing.

But he said the company's advertising must be creative because its $42 million ad budget is only a fraction of those of its bigger Japanese-based rivals, including Toyota, Nissan and Honda. "We are fighting and scratching for consumer awareness," he said.

The commercials were created by the Los Angeles office of the ad agency Della Femina, Travisano & Partners. The only concern, according to ad account manager Dennis Remsing, was that they might offend Isuzu dealers.

But Kern said that the dealers like them, and that the ads get raves from viewers as well.

"A traveling salesman wrote and said he was shaving one morning, listening to the television, and couldn't see the overprint when he heard the line about cars for $9. He said he practically shaved his face off," Kern said.

The Continental Illinois ads have been running since late September in the Chicago area, where the bank is based, and are designed to build awareness that Continental makes consumer loans. Surveys found many people didn't know that.

"We didn't want it to look like a lot of the other bank advertising," said John Delany, the Continental account supervisor at the Minneapolis-based ad agency Fallon McElligott.

The commercials don't. In addition to one in which the pitchman twirls the baton, Continental is using two other ads in which he plays a harmonica and spins a hula-hoop while waiting for customers to call.

Terry Kirk, Continental's ad manager, said the approach "gives our viewers credit for realizing that we are having fun and trying to get a straightforward message across." And she said it seems to be working.

"We have been getting more calls for loan applications than we expected," she said.

Lumber orders up for West

PORTLAND (AP) — Lumber production and shipments fell, but orders picked up in 12 Western states in the week ended Oct. 4.

The Western Wood Products Association reports that production during the week was 409 million board feet, 12 million feet less than the previous week. Orders were 403 million feet, 31 million feet over the previous week's level. Shipments were reported at 376 million feet, a decrease of 43 million feet.

Year-to-date figures through 40 weeks of 1986 show production at 14.685 billion board feet, orders at 14.781 billion feet and shipments at 14.602 billion feet. Totals a year ago at this time show production at 13.248 billion feet, orders 13.282 billion feet and shipments 13.206 billion feet.

Inventories in the region are 2.298 billion board feet, 33 million feet more than the previous week. Figures for the same week a year ago show inventories were 2.213 billion board feet.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A small railroad in Idaho's Panhandle carrying primarily forest products will receive a $500,000 rehabilitation grant from the federal government's Local Rail Service Assistance Program.

The St. Maries Railroad, which operates a 72-mile line between Plummer Junction, St. Maries and Bovill, was awarded the funds as part of the program to preserve rail service on light-density lines.

Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, said about $10 million was available for allocation through the LRSA program this year, but applications from 22 states totaled $23 million.

The St. Maries rehabilitation project is the only one ever to request or receive LRSA funding, Symms said.

IBM says profits dip; NCR reports a gain

NEW YORK (AP) — International Business Machines Corp. said Monday its profit fell 27 percent in the third quarter, and it appeared likely to post back-to-back declines in annual earnings for the first time since the Depression.

Analysts said the profit pinch for the world's largest computer company mainly reflected a slowdown in capital spending by IBM's customers and expressed confidence that it would bounce back.

IBM gave no timetable on when it expected a recovery, and investors reacted by selling stock. IBM was down 87½ cents a share to $122.75, a new 52-week low, at midafternoon on the New York Stock Exchange.

The bluest of the blue-chip stocks, IBM sold for more than $160 a share in the past year and $134.50 as recently as the end of September.

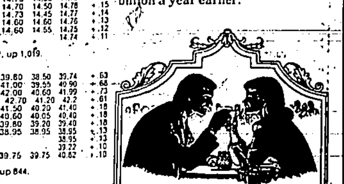

Separately, NCR Corp. of Dayton, Ohio, said earnings rose 2 percent in the third quarter on a 13 percent increase in revenue.

IBM earned $1.08 billion in the July-September period, or $1.76 a share, down from $1.47 billion, or $2.40 a share, in the year-earlier period, the company said. Revenue rose 1.8 percent to $11.9 billion from $11.7 billion a year earlier.

For the first nine months of the year, IBM said earnings fell 12.3 percent to $3.40 billion, or $5.53 a share, from $3.87 billion, or $6.31 a share, a year earlier. Revenue for the nine-month period rose 4.3 percent to $34.3 billion from $32.9 billion a year earlier.

The last time IBM's earnings fell two years in a row was 1932 and 1933. In order to avoid the same fate this year, IBM would have to earn $3.18 billion in the final three months of the year, an 18 percent increase over the strong $2.68 billion in the final quarter of 1985.

NCR said it earned $73.4 million, or 75 cents a share, in the third quarter, up from $71.7 million, or 72 cents a share, a year earlier. Revenue rose to $1.18 billion from $1.04 billion a year earlier.

THE ACES®

BOBBY WOLFF

— Emerson.

"How do you play today's diamonds? Be careful. It doesn't pay to lead a high card when a lower one will do.

South won his spade king, drew one round of trumps with his ace and led his diamond nine, intending to try two diamond finesses. West covered with the jack, and dummy's queen won. South led a trump back to his king to lead another diamond. West's diamond king going to dummy's ace. When South tried to cash the diamond 10, West ruffed, drew a round of trump and then led his 10 of spades to East's queen and South's ace. Since South had yet to lose a spade and a club, the game went one down.

It's easy to blame South's failure on the foul trump break. However, that's not what killed the game. South should have been more careful in diamonds.

Instead of leading the diamond nine at trick three, South should have led a small one. West's jack is won by dummy's queen and a second trump is won by South's king. Another low diamond brings West's king and dummy's ace, but now South leads a low diamond to his nine. West ruffs, draws a round of trump and leads spades, but South is in control. His losing spade goes on dummy's high diamond, and the defenders get only two trumps and one club.

THE ACES® BOBBY WOLFF

— Emerson.

How do you play today's diamonds? Be careful. It doesn't pay to lead a high card when a lower one will do.

South won his spade king, drew one round of trumps with his ace and led his diamond nine, intending to try two diamond finesses. West covered with the jack, and dummy's queen won. South led a trump back to his king to lead another diamond. West's diamond king going to dummy's ace. When South tried to cash the diamond 10, West ruffed, drew a round of trump and then led his 10 of spades to East's queen and South's ace. Since South had yet to take a spade and a club, the game went one down.

It's easy to blame South's failure on the foul trump break. However, that's not what killed the game. South should have been more careful in diamonds.

Instead of leading the diamond nine at trick three, South should have led a small one. West's jack is won by dummy's queen and a second trump is won by South's king. Another low diamond brings West's king and dummy's ace, but now South leads a low diamond to his nine. West ruffs, draws a round of trump and leads spades; but South is in control. His losing spade goes on dummy's high diamond, and the defenders get only two trumps and one club.

New Salad Classics

here's cobb salad, salade Nicoise, Caesar's Salad and chef salad — all salad classics. Now there's curried pasta salad, corn chowder salad and rice and beet salad — all new salad classics.

These contemporary classics were created by Chef Blake Emerson Swihart to meet the demands of today's busy lifestyles for food that tastes great, yet is simple to prepare.

"Americans are becoming more sophisticated about food tastes," says Swihart, a Culinary Institute of American graduate, citing availability of croissants in fast food restaurants as an example. "Yet, we're busier than ever before. We just don't have time to whip up exotic, elegant dishes every night of the week."

He says that today's culinary smarts means combining good taste with convenience and nutrition" — not to mention flair and imagination.

"For these salads," Swihart says, "I've taken a few traditional American dishes and turned them into contemporary classics. They're easy to prepare and utilize the best of quality convenience foods."

Curried pasta salad combines rotelle or cavatelli with farm fresh cauliflower, baby whole carrots, snow pea pods and curry-spiked Italian salad dressing. The texture is toned with cherry tomato halves and diced avocado, then garnished with chopped pistachio nuts. The twisting grooves of the pasta help to hold this salad's delectable sauce.

Corn chowder salad is a special favorite of Swihart. The frozen small onions with cream sauce forms the beginnings of this salad's chowder-like, creamy sauce. Frozen, tender sweet corn is the salad's signature ingredient. Sliced celery and chunks of red-skinned potatoes complete the picture.

Dramatic and delicious, rice and beet salad is proof that artful arrangement of a few simple ingredients results in eye- and appetite-appeal. Arrange prepared rice on a bed of spinach leaves. Place drained and quartered canned beets in center of rice and sprinkle with red onion slices. Arrange hard-cooked egg slices around beets. Then drizzle with prepared lemon and herb salad dressing. Who could feel guilty about using convenience foods when the dish looks this spectacular and tastes gourmet?

CURRIED PASTA SALAD

2 cups rotelle or cavatelli
2 cups each cauliflower, baby whole carrots and snow pea pods, or any other combination
½ cup Italian salad dressing
1 to 1½ teaspoons curry powder
1 cup halved cherry tomatoes
1 medium avocado, diced
Chopped pistachio or other nuts

Cook pasta as directed on package; drain. Rinse with cold water and drain. Place cold, tap water over vegetables in a strainer to thaw; drain well. In a large bowl, combine dressing and curry powder. Add pasta, vegetables, tomatoes and avocado. Garnish with chopped nuts. Chill 2 hours. Store any leftover salad in refrigerator.

Makes 8 servings.

Quick Trick: Drain cooked pasta over vegetables in a strainer to thaw. Rinse with cold water and drain. Then proceed as directed.

CORN CHOWDER SALAD

1 package (10 ounces) frozen small onions with cream sauce
2 medium potatoes, peeled, cooked and cut into ½-inch cubes
2 cups thinly sliced celery
½ teaspoon pepper
1 to 2 teaspoons fresh dill weed
Slices cooked bacon, crumbled

Hazel Hansen's recipes span the 20th century

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Hazel Hansen's recipes are not only abundant, but span a number of eras of the 20th century. At age 86, she has a 60-year collection.

She says she has some "beautiful recipes" dating back to the days of Prudence Penny, who she describes as having been the Betty Crocker for the Oakland (Calif.) Tribune during the 1920s.

Through the years, whenever she gave or attended a party where an outstanding dish was served, there were requests for the recipe. "We always felt the party was a success," she says, "if the recipe was asked for."

Most of her entertaining nowadays, she says, is "a dessert afternoon, not parties as such where you really entertain — where you dress up and where you serve lots of food."

And, now, she has only herself for which to prepare everyday meals. One way she meets this cooking challenge is by cooking a chicken once a week to provide several meals.

Hansen came to Twin Falls from California eight years ago to be close to her family. She says she likes it here, and is working on a poem about the fall colors in Idaho.

"Going down my street," she says, "the golds are also magnificent, and where I lived in the East Bay of California, a color wasn't vibrant like it is here. And, I love the skies. They are so blue and so clear; or so decorated with clouds that they are just fantastic."

In the past, some of her poems were published in anthologies, and she received certificates of merit and honorable mention in poetry competitions.

Now, she spends more time constructing puzzles than writing poetry. In the last eight years, she has devised enough of them to fill a small book.

She also likes to play bridge, and sometimes when she is to be hostess, makes a cake called Mississippi Mud. It is a chocolate lover's delight. She says it is misnamed, and should be called "candy cake."

MISSISSIPPI MUD CAKE

Cream 1 cup oil with 2 cups sugar. Add 4 eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Mix and add ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup cocoa, 1½ cups flour and 1 cup chopped pecans or walnuts. Add 3 teaspoons vanilla. Pour into a greased 9x13-inch dish. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Remove and let cool for 10 minutes. Spread with one 7-ounce jar marshmallow cream. (The cake is still warm, so it spreads easily.) Cover with foil and cool. Refrigerate. When cold, frost with the following.

Frosting:
½ cup, or 1 stick margarine
½ cup cocoa
1 pound powdered sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla

Melt margarine. Remove from stove and add cocoa, powdered sugar and vanilla. Add milk. Frosting should spread easily. Add a wee bit more milk if necessary. Then refrigerate. Serves 12. Very rich.

Perfecting recipes takes lots of time

Potpourri time. In case you are unfamiliar with the word "potpourri" it's a mixture of spices, herbs and flowers or a word commonly used to describe a miscellaneous collection.

Today, I am a potpourri expert. I harvested all the leaves from roses and lavender in the garden this summer and now am blending them for sachets to make rooms smell good. It should take me a few more hours, and I'll have a product I could buy for a couple of dollars! It's not one of those time-money efficient things.

In fact, I really don't think my cooking has been all that time-money efficient lately either. I've been spending hours and hours and lots of ingredients ($$$$) to try and perfect some recipes. Sometimes you get lucky, and other times you just keep on keeping on.

With our recipe contest coming up, I thought I'd share a couple of ideas with you.

The first is from a reader, Marilyn Koernick of Twin Falls. She called and asked if I would be interested in her soft granola bar recipe. I was, and so she sent it. It's good.

She wrote, "I started out making regular hard granola bars and then decided to make them softer by substituting marshmallows for part of the honey. Then it seemed to need crunch so added the rice crispies. And since my husband loves chocolate chips, what else could I do but add those too."

Now that's a perfect example of how to take a recipe and develop it into something personal and often a winner in a contest. You take a basic and sort of get an idea of where you want to go and keep trying different things until you get what you like best.

Another example is the woman, originally from Rupert, who won the state pie bake-off contest at the Utah state fair this year. She had to bake a peach pie. So she looked up all the peach pie recipes and found most of them basically the same. So she started experimenting and the final product had maraschino cherries, Tang and some of her apricot-pineapple jam plus some other items just out of her refrigerator. She won and now gets to go to the national level.

There really are not many absolutely new recipes unless you get "new" ingredients. So basically you take a recipe and play with it.

This week alone, I've made three different kinds of bread. There was a special sourdough, a really wheaty, whole wheat and a potato one using frozen hash browns. Actually none of them were really great, but they were pretty good and we enjoyed eating them. And I'll continue until I get them just the way I want, then pass them on to you.

You have over two weeks to get your recipes in, so start working on it now. They are due Friday, October 31 (Halloween).

The following Monday, the preliminary judging will take place and you will be notified if you are a finalist in any category. If you are selected you will bring your recipe ready to be tasted by a panel of professional cooks on Friday, November 7.

We had a good time last year getting to know each other and am looking forward to this contest.

As many recipes as possible will be printed in a special edition Nov. 20, so get working on that culinary masterpiece.

Your recipe should be typed or printed legibly. You may submit as many as three recipes. The grand prize is $100. Each category has a $25 prize for first place, $15 for second and $10 for third.

Mail your recipes (make sure your name and category is on each recipe) to The Times News, Attention: Recipe Contest, P.O. Box 548, Twin Falls, Idaho, 83303.

Games can brighten those coupon parties

By MARTIN SLOANE
United Feature Syndicate

Supermarket shopper

In a recent column, a reader asked, "What's a coupon party?" Here are responses from other readers who have enjoyed them.

Dear Martin — Here's a game that has worked well at our coupon parties:

One person, usually the hostess, asks questions. Each person is allowed to pick a food or product category from which the question they answer will be asked. We use categories such as desserts, vegetables and cereals.

The person answering the question is allowed three guesses, and if she is right, she wins a coupon. At the end of the game, whoever has won the most coupons wins the grand prize, usually a huge envelope full of coupons and refund forms. — Marjorie Harris, Keyport, N.Y.

Dear Martin — The Brevard Coupon Clippers celebrated their first anniversary last March with a club shopping spree and a party.

For the party, each member and spouse was asked to bring a dish, but it had to be bought or made with items that were purchased only with coupons — no cash.

This may sound difficult, but we ended up with a wide variety of very tempting dishes. We also contributed $1 each to the hostess for miscellaneous items, but very little had to be bought with cash. Even the sterno can under a heating dish was purchased with a free-product coupon.

After we finished eating, we played games. Each member wrote some phrase or sentence that relates to couponing or refunding on a slip of paper. Then, along the line of "charades," each member's spouse pulled a phrase slip out of a hat, then acted out the sentence until someone on his team was able to come up with it.

It did get a little messy, since some of the men, looking for props, attacked the leftovers — and our coupon files and refund forms. But a good time was had by all. — Lucy Kline, Port St. John, Fla.

Dear Martin — I have found several coupons that offer a savings of $1 off the regular price of the item. But I have had a difficult time finding a supermarket that will take $1 coupons. Most of the supermarkets near me have a 75-cent limit, and that is the most they will give me for my $1 coupons.

Dear Roslyn — There is no law that governs coupons. Stores do not even have to redeem them.

Since redeeming coupons is purely voluntary, supermarkets are free to make their own rules, as long as they do not violate the manufacturer's redemption instructions.

In your case, however, the supermarkets may not be acting properly. If a supermarket chooses to place a limit on the amount for which it will redeem coupons, it should explain to the manufacturer that it has placed this limit on coupons and that it only wants to be paid back the 75 cents it gave to the consumer — and not the full face value of the coupon.

Do supermarkets like yours tell the coupon clearinghouses that they gave consumers less than face value? Not very likely. I would like to hear from the supermarket owner who says his store does, and if I do, I promise I'll print his letter!

When stores take coupons but do not give their full face value, consumers should write to the clearinghouses and alert them to that fact. The name and address of the clearinghouse is in the small print on the coupon.

from a couple that had found cooking tomatoes a bit bitter. Would you please drop me a line again. I promise to not lose it this time. I think I have an answer. Also, am still looking for a good squaw bread recipe. Any help out there?

OR
SOFT GRANOLA BARS

3½ cups oats
½ cup wheat germ
1½ cup rice crispies
1 cup coconut, shredded
½ cup margarine
3 cups marshmallows
½ cup honey
2½ cup chocolate chips

You'll need a 9-by-12-inch pan and to preheat your oven to 350.

Mix the oats and wheat germ together in the pan and bake for 15 to 20 minutes, stirring at least every 5 minutes until toasted.

In a bowl or saucepan melt the marshmallows, margerine and honey together. You can do this on your stovetop or in your microwave.

Mix the melted ingredients into the dry mixture and after they are well mixed, quickly stir in the chocolate chips and pour out in the 9-by-12 pan and pat down.

Let them cool, then cut into 16 bars and wrap individually in foil. She says they keep in a freezer and probably would do well in an airtight container. Actually she says they don't really keep very well, as they disappear fast with hunters and fishermen.

It's great Indian Summer so enjoy!

SPINACH BAKE
Serves 8 or 9

1 pint small curd cottage cheese
1½ cups milk
1 cup bread crumbs, broken up and soaked in the milk
6 eggs, beaten
1½ cups sharp cheddar cheese, shredded
3 green springs onions, minced
1 very small clove garlic, grated, or a couple of dashes of garlic powder

Beat eggs. Add the soaked bread and milk, the cottage cheese, cheese, onions and garlic. Do not add any salt. Pour into greased baking dish. Bake approximately 50 minutes, until a toothpick or knife inserted in center comes out clean. Serve hot, and pass the sauce.

Sauce:
Combine and heat:
2 cans mushroom soup
2 cans mushrooms stems and pieces
2 small cans deviled ham, or 2 cans whole medium shrimp

She says her recipe for meatballs is great for beginners, or anybody who is pressed for time. "They can put it in the oven, and that's that. It is nice you don't have to brown them," she says.

MEATBALLS
IN ONION SOUP

2 pounds ground beef
5 slices bread, crusts removed, grated
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 scant teaspoon salt
1½ cups milk
2 cans onion soup

Pour milk over the grated bread. If preferred, bread may be soaked in milk and mashed with a fork. Add salt, baking powder and meat. Mix thoroughly with hands. Form into about 24 meatballs, about 2-inches in diameter. Roll in flour. Re-roll a second time. Place in a 9x13-inch, or larger, baking dish. Pour onion soup over the meatballs, and distribute soup and meatballs equally. Bake 45 minutes at 350 degrees. Meatballs should brown on top in about half the baking time. Turn them over and let other sides brown during remaining baking time.

"I put the chicken on it's back," she says, "in an 8x13-inch baking pan, with about 1½ cups of the water, and put it in the oven at 325 degrees for about 1 hour to 1 hour and 15 minutes. I put a potato on the rack to bake, and if I have a little casserole, it goes in too.

"And, that chicken serves for several meals, and can be creamed, it can be eaten cold, and it's the easiest way to cook a chicken — and you never have a dry chicken."

Before putting it in the oven, she takes the fat that is near the cavity of the chicken, and depending upon how much there is, puts it on the breast and thighs. This fat gets into the water and cooks. About 10 minutes before it's done, she removes the pieces of fat, and bastes the chicken with the liquid in the bottom of the pan several times, which gives it a nice glaze.

She says it makes sense, when baking chicken, to use two pans, and bake a couple at the same time.

All of these recipes are simple and economical. She says they are good for the busy cook or even a busy one for a budget watcher.

Salads

In saucepan, place milk and onions with cream sauce. Bring to a boil, stirring occasionally. Reduce heat, cover and simmer 4 minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat and stir until sauce is smooth. Stir in corn, potatoes, celery, pepper and dillweed. Cover and chill at least 2 hours. Serve on lettuce, sprinkled with bacon. Makes 3 servings.

Quick Trick: The frozen onions with cream sauce is the base for this salad's chowder-like creamy sauce.

LAYERED SALAD

1 cup rice
3½ cups shredded iceberg lettuce (1 head)
1 small red onion, thinly sliced
1 package (10 oz.) frozen green peas, thawed
1 can (15¼ oz.) red kidney beans, drained
1 envelope zesty Italian dressing mix

Prepare rice as directed on package; cool. Place 1½ cups of the lettuce in 2-quart, straight-sided bowl. Add half the onions and top with half of the rice. Add a layer of peas. Repeat lettuce, onion and rice layers. Top with kidney beans and add remaining lettuce. Chill. Prepare salad dressing mix as directed on package. About 1 hour before serving, pour evenly over salad and chill. Makes 8 servings.

Quick Trick: Be creative with the salad dressing mix. Use a flavored vinegar, such as red wine or tarragon. Try a specialty oil, such as olive or sesame.

RICE AND BEET SALAD

1½ cups Minute rice
1½ cups water
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
¾ teaspoon salt
4 cups (4 oz.) fresh spinach
1 can (16 oz.) small whole beets, drained and quartered
½ cup halved red onion slices
2 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
1 cup prepared lemon and herbs salad dressing

Prepare rice with water, butter and salt as directed on package. Chill. Place spinach on serving platter and spoon rice on top. Place beets in center and sprinkle with onion. Place egg slices around beets and pour dressing evenly over salad. Chill 1 hour.

Makes 6 servings.

Protecting plants from winter damage

Allen Wilson
Intermountain gardening

Evergreens and young shade and fruit trees are subject to damage by harsh winter conditions in the Intermountain area.

Even plants which are hardy enough to survive may suffer some damage. There are some simple techniques which will reduce or eliminate winter damage.

The most common cause of winter injury is dessication or drying, not cold injury. Even cold injury is more a result of fluctuating warm and cold temperatures rather than extreme cold.

Evergreens lose water through their needles during winter as well as summer. Those exposed to wind lose water faster than the roots can replace it, causing the needles to turn brown. This is particularly true if the soil is dry or frozen. A good watering before the soil freezes deeply will help provide a reserve of water in the plants.

Evergreens can be shielded from wind by wrapping or screening with burlap. Smaller plants can be completely wrapped. A temporary wind screen can be placed on the windward side of larger plants by fastening burlap between two pipes or posts. Do not use plastic to wrap plants. This increases the changes in temperature and can do more harm than good.

Young shade and fruit trees can suffer extensive damage to the bark on the trunk below the lowest branch. This damage is caused by bright winter sun heating the southwest side of the trunk followed by a sudden drop in temperature during the night. This alternate thawing and freezing can split the bark and kill the food-conducting tissue just under the bark.

Anything which shades the lower trunk will reduce or prevent damage. One of the simplest techniques is to paint the south and west sides of the trunk with outdoor white latex paint. This reflects the sun and reduces heat buildup. Do not use oil base paint which can damage plant tissue.

The trunk can be temporarily wrapped with burlap or tree wrap available from nurseries to shade from the sun. Any wrap used should be loose or porous so that air can circulate next to the trunk. Wraps should be removed in the spring. Wraps can also help protect from rodent injury such as rabbits and mice. After trees have been planted for 4 or 5 years, the bark is usually thick enough to avoid injury.

Another helpful practice on young deciduous trees is to mound soil around the lower trunk four or five inches deep. This insulates the graft union, which is the most susceptible to damage during the early part of the winter.

Helping a pet plant survive the cold

By HENRY MITCHELL
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — One of the prettiest silver-leaved plants is the thing called "Silver Mound," more grandly (and more nearly correctly) Artemisia schmidtiana nana. Great numbers are sold to gardeners here every year, because it is one of those plants that sells on sight.

The leaves are divided into mere threads, green-white-silver, and the plant mounds itself up to about 6 inches in height and a foot wide. In rain it looks more green, but ordinarily it looks as if the plant is made of some silky metal.

Usually it does not fare well in our gardens, because it likes sharp drainage and abhors any standing moisture in winter. In our glorious heavy clay loam, which is sopping wet all winter, it frequently dies outright and we say (or annoyed gardeners say) it isn't hardy and doesn't survive the winter.

I have grown this splendid little plant off and on for 30 years, mostly off. I would stick it in at the edge of a walk and hope for the best. Sometimes it would pull through the wet winter, sometimes not, but in those days you could get another plant for about a quarter, so the loss was easily remedied.

It still is. But no gardener really likes losing a plant because of his own carelessness, ignorance or laziness, so I was always a bit abashed when this artemisia collapsed on me.

Just recently I saw some quite nice plants on sale at a garden center and bought a couple. This time I am doing something different for my silver babies. I have a container of brick on concrete (the top of some brick gate piers) filled with pea gravel. One of them has only 2 to 3 inches of gravel, the other one has about a foot.

I then took some rotted hay, and by this I mean hay that has turned completely black and that crumbles beautifully in the hand, showing no sign of stem or husk, just pure black humus.

I took 10 handfuls of this for the shallow container and 25 handfuls for the deeper one and worked it into the pea gravel. I watered it until it was distributed all through the gravel. From the top you see nothing but gravel. No sign of the humus in it.

In this I planted the two silver artemisias in a sunny spot.

In building the piers (their purpose is to hold a gate, but no harm in a few little plants crowning the bricks) I carefully dug out drainage holes while the mortar was soft.

The holes are just above the solid concrete core and beneath the layer of gravel. I put a layer of heavy plastic over the concrete core before putting the gravel in. Now if I water the gravel, the water comes pouring out the drainage hole at the side of the pier a few seconds after I pour.

Essentially the plants will grow in pure gravel, except for the small amount of humus worked in between the individual pebbles.

I hope the artemisia will flourish on this starvation diet, and at least I can guarantee that standing water in heavy clay during winter will not be the cause of death if it dies.

As a boy I often admired the polypody ferns that grew on branches of great trees in the river bottom forests of the Lower Mississippi Valley, rooting slightly into fissures of the bark.

In dry weather the ferns were almost brittle and curled up a bit, but plumped out when the air was moist.

The identical fern grows beautifully on what seem to be bare rocks at Great Falls here. Evidently enough food dissolves in the water running over the roots in rainy spells to keep it growing in a healthy way.

But often the fern sprouts in some fissure of the rock where a small amount of rotted leaves or other debris has accumulated, and from this original stronghold the polypody creeps forth to face new worlds, even on bare rock faces.

The same fern, planted in our good heavy loam, invariably dies with me. It does not like fat living, and while it needs plenty of moisture it does not tolerate (with me) soggy earth against its creeping stems.

The same is true not only of this fern that grows so admirably on trees and rocks in our South, but of many alpines in general. Many pinks or dianthus object strongly to heavy soil on the acid side, but flourish on lean diets especially in regions of limy soil.

I do not doubt that many difficult pinks would flourish if given very gritty limy soil and perfect drainage.

We often blame our "hot, muggy summers" for the loss of alpines, when instead we should blame our failure to provide the perfect drainage they require.

Surely every gardener has noticed how admirably many seedlings sprout and grow at the edge of a gravel walk (one reason I am opposed to gravel walks) while the same plants languish or die in the garden flower bed.

I hope none of this will be misinterpreted to mean we should turn the garden into a gravel wasteland. Our roses, peonies, phlox, irises and many-most, even-favorite garden plants love our rich clay loams, once we have added peat or leaf mold or compost.

Nothing is more difficult than trying to garden on the kind of soil I have made for the artemisia. Few plants will even try to survive in pea gravel and a handful of humus, but some will.

The kentilworth ivy (Cymbalaria) is seen growing on walls of stone, finding almost invisible footholds where there is a bit of rotted mortar or earth, and the same is true of the valerian (Centranthus), which often finds a tiny foothold and winds up forcing good-sized stones apart as its roots gain strength.

And one of the prettiest little daisies comes from Mexico and has white (fading to pink) flowers the size of nickels. It is often thought to be not hardy, but it is much hardier than you think if you grow it in a stone wall.

It is very good on sunny castle walls or the ruins of old abbeys, making the most beautiful mats of soft color, particularly beautiful with the tiny blue morning glory (decidedly tender to cold) called Convolvulus mauritanicus.

My own garden, and perhaps yours, is short indeed of castle walls and abbey ruins, but I have established to my satisfaction the little erigeron will grow nicely on a concrete or cinder block in a handful of sandy humus.

In any case, it is fun occasionally to prepare a special place and soil for some plant we like, that refuses to grow in our ordinary (and how lucky we are to have it) heavy soil.

Panel tests red wines

By NATHAN CHROMAN
The Los Angeles Times

Commenting on the red wine results of the 47th Annual Los Angeles County Fair Competition, Dimitri Tchelistcheff, noted enologist and red wine panel chairman, said "Our standards and expectations were higher than ever."

He and three co-panelists struggled through 94 California Cabernet Sauvignon entries, 3 years or less in age, and awarded only 12 medals. Most of the Cabernets were from the vintage of 1983, generally conceded to be good to excellent vintage.

"Generally, quite a good group of younger wines," he said. "However, some were defective; indeed, a few contained bacterial contamination and were quickly eliminated." Co-panelists were Richard Petersen, former wine maker at Beaulieu Vineyards and Monterey Vineyards, A.D. Webb, professor emeritus at University of California, Davis and Narsai David, a San Francisco wine and food expert.

An especially attractive Cabernet showing more of today's preferred lighter structure, coupled with a softer, more agreeable taste, Santa Lucia Winery's Wild Horse, Central Coast, 1983 was named Best of Class. Other gold medalists are Grand Cru, Sonoma, 1983; White Oak, Alexander Valley, 1984; Pine Ridge, Rutherford Cuvee, 1983; Davis Bynum, Alexander Valley, 1983; and Sierra Vista El Dorado, 1983.

Silver medalists are Lake Spring, Napa, 1983, and Robert Pecota, 1983. Bronze medalists are Belvedere Wine Co., Robert Young, 1983; Castoro, 1982; Sausal, Alexander Valley, 1983; and Taylor California Cellars, 1983.

Not to be overlooked are Honorable Mention honorees Domaine Laurier, 1983; Hart, Temecula, 1983; and I.S.C. Wines of California, Non-Vintage. For the latter, be sure to inquire whether it is the same wine as in the competition. If so, it is likely to be a fine value at less than $5.

With more entries (126) and more bottle age, the Cabernet class of wines 3 years of age or older produced more medalists. These are solid choices, generally more mellow because of greater bottle age. A magnificent bottle at $15 and indeed one of the best of the vintage is gold medalist winner William Hill, Gold Label-Napa Valley, 1982. Other gold medalists are Estrella River, 1982; Buena Vista Private Reserve, Sonoma Valley, 1982; and Round Hill, Napa Valley, 1982, which is likely to be the least costly at less than $10.

Separated by only a smidgin of taste from the gold honorees are silver medalists Beringer, Knights Valley, Proprietor Grown, 1982; Conn Creek, 1982; Durney, Carmel Valley, 1982; Gemello, Alexander Valley, 1982; Mont St. John Cellars, Private Reserve, 1981 (the oldest of the bunch), St. Clement, Napa, 1982; and Joseph Phelps, 1982.

Bronze medalists are Crystal Valley, Reserve-North Coast, 1983; Parducci, Founders, 1982; Belvedere Wine Co., York Creek, 1982; and V. Sattui, Napa Valley, 1982. Here, too, consumers would be well-advised to try the Honorable Mention honorees Chateau Laurier, 1980; Papagni Vineyards, Estate Bottled, 1981; and Rombauer Vineyards, Napa Valley, 1982.

Unquestionably, the most improved red wine class is that of Pinot Noir, 3 years of age or less. These wines are fast gaining in popularity for agreeable, soft, subtle styles requiring little or no bottle age. Gold medalists are Saintsbury, Carneros, 1984; Williams-Selyem Russian River, 1984; and Sebastiani, August Sebastiani Country Pinot Noir.

Woman responsible for the remarkable rise of the kiwi fruit

By BEA LEWIS
Newsday

Hold Frieda Caplan responsible for the remarkable rise of the kiwi fruit.

Not only did Caplan promote kiwi tirelessly until it became a fixture on supermarket shelves, she even gave kiwi its name. Before 1962, the fuzzy little fruit with the sweet green interior was known to students of culinary exotica as the Chinese gooseberry.

When Caplan began importing the fruit from New Zealand, she said she tagged it "kiwi" after that country's best-known bird.

Last year industry sales hit 180 million kiwis, and 1,000 California farmers have gotten in on the act.

What started out as the darling of nouvelle cuisine went mainstream. And when chic chefs abandoned kiwi as a cliche, Caplan was ready to supply them with the chili peppers or baby vegetables of the next wave.

The success of kiwi is but one example of Caplan's enthusiasm and marketing savvy as a wholesaler of specialty produce. To a country formerly dominated by apples and onions, her company, Frieda's Finest, based in Los Angeles, brought cherimoyas and spaghetti squash, horn melons and jicama.

"I'll tell you about Frieda; she has had some oddball items, but she's always worth listening to," said Harold Alston, vice president for produce for Stop and Shop supermarkets, a chain of 112 stores in New England. "Customers get tired of cabbage and carrots and carrots and cabbage; we're always looking for something new. She never lets us down."

Caplan started her wholesale operation 25 years ago with a $10,000 loan from her father; last year the company grossed $11 million handling 250 different items.

The company has grown from a seven-person storefront operation to a 45,000-square-foot office and warehouse complex with 55 employees. There's an expanding herb garden outside the white building. And a purple — yes, purple — logo catches your attention.

"When we started business, we were in such a rush that the sign painter could only use what he had available in his garage. We were rather surprised the next day, but the color purple stayed," Caplan said.

To this day the logo reflects that rush job. And so do the purple walls, purple carpets, purple pens. Ask for coffee, and you get it in a purple mug.

Before Caplan, the success rate of specialty items was low, according to Michael Klackle, produce buyer for Dominick's Finer Foods, an 87-unit supermarket chain in metropolitan Chicago.

"Take jicama. It's not just getting the customer to try the product; you need support with recipes, with ideas, with in-store promotions," he said. "The customer has to know what to do with jicama. You can't throw it on the shelf and walk away, or the product will die."

Caplan slaps stickers on the new products, provides posters and banners for the stores, sends out brochures for customers on the unusual items and offers color photos that retailers can use in ads.

A slide show and demonstration kits are available so that in-store demonstrators can learn just how to promote Golden Nugget squash or enoki mushrooms, sapota — also called custard apple — and tear-drop cherry tomatoes.

It's time for brown-baggers to consider a new lunch carrier

By MINNIE BERNARDINO
Los Angeles Times

There comes a point in a brown-bagger's life when, after day in and day out with the same midday pack lunch, he realizes he needs a change of tote. He finally gets tired of the looks of that wrinkled brown sack. That stained and dull plastic food box has to go, a tried and true friend it was. Or in the case of a schoolchild, the rusty lunch pail handed down two older siblings ago may just not hold up another school year.

Time for a new lunch carrier, brown-bagger.

In our quest for newer lunch kits, here is what we discovered on market shelves:

Easy to find in supermarkets are inexpensive but a little upscale "brown" bags — no longer brown, mind you. Available in sleek, smooth paper, the bags come in modern pastel floral or abstract or geometric designs, not unlike the gift-wrapping papers.

Cool Cuisine from Trend Pacific in Los Angeles has a lot in store for the brown-bagger or picnicker. The lunch box kit includes a rectangular lunch-box container, a plastic drinking flask and a canvas carryall. The manufacturer also added an adjustable plastic divider to separate the goodies inside the box. Made of heavy-duty plastic, the lunch box comes in bright blue, red, yellow, black, white and gray.

With the canvas tote, one has a choice of striped designs to coordinate with the color of the lunch box. The bag is also large enough to have room for other take-along items. Aside from the convenience of the bag, Cool Cuisine offers a cooling advantage with its flask. The flat canteen is filled with a favorite beverage and frozen. When placed over the food in the lunch box, the beverage will defrost in a few hours to become an ice cold drink while the chilled air within the container keeps the food cool.

Since Fun Designs Inc. in Duxbury, Mass., brought out its lunch-box radio for children this year, the company has had a difficult time meeting demand. "It's just rad," we hear from a 6-year-old. Of course, the novelty of having a built-in radio (AM only) and speaker as well as headphones with a lunch box would be "radical."

Lunch 'N Tunes' lunch-box radio comes with a cartoon design and color-coordinated thermos. The colors are red, yellow, raspberry and turquoise with three cartoon designs. Equipped with volume and tuning knobs, the lunch-box radio uses one nine-volt battery. It is also packaged in a full-color box, which makes it a nice gift idea for the holidays, if the product becomes more readily available by late fall.

Some people get tired of lugging the same lunch box every day. To get them out of this monotony, Traffic Works Inc. in Los Angeles introduced a line of plastic lunch containers and totes in bold colors and designs. These include sturdy plastic folding cartons with handles that have printed designs of hearts, bears, penguins and sports as well as see-through plain or striped boxes.

Particularly interesting are the Chinese "food-to-go" cartons. Available in three sizes, small, medium and large, these washable boxes come in clear or in flashy red, black and white with red or black wire handles.

Grabbing the current interest of youngsters in dinosaurs, Traffic Works came out with its Dinosaur design collection for back-to-school lunch boxes with matching school accessories like folders and pencil cases. They're very eye-catching with their bright red or yellow colors that have printed black designs of dinosaurs and bats.

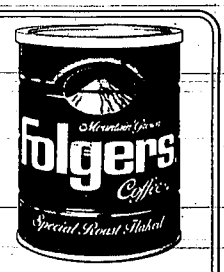

If you are a brown-bagger who stashes a sandwich in a briefcase, consider the new Clik Case from Outer Circle Products in Chicago. A fun escape from the traditional briefcase, Clik Case comes in an assortment of bold colors. According to one store owner, yuppies usually buy these in many colors to match their outfit.

Los Angeles Times photos

A small limestone likeness of Darth Vader is one of the more modern images which will adorn the cathedral

Stone church adorns skyline of Washington

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — When George Washington and architect Pierre L'Enfant were planning a new capital city here in the late 1700s, they happened to visit Secretary of Treasury Joseph Nourse, whose home was on the highest point of land in the area.

Nourse told his visitors of his dream for a church there one day. And, to that end, a small box containing 50 gold dollars with a note designating the money "for a free church on Alban's Hill" was found after the death of Nourse's granddaughter, who shared his goal.

Today, more than two centuries after Nourse told Washington of his dream — and 79 years after President Theodore Roosevelt laid the Washington Cathedral's foundation stone with the same silver trowel that Washington used to set the cornerstone of the U.S. Capitol — what could be the world's last great piece of Gothic architecture is finally nearing completion.

"We're just beginning to think about it," Provost Charles A. Perry says of the current goal of 1989 or 1990, when the cathedral, one of the Western world's great monuments to Christianity, is expected to be completed and consecrated.

Even with the benefits of today's sophisticated technology, building a true Gothic cathedral is a slow, laborious task. And, in these fast-paced times, when new skyscrapers seem to appear overnight from heaps of glass and steel, the Washington Cathedral rises slowly on this city's horizon, like an old, gray lady from her rocker.

"We just keep setting one stone on top of the other and keep going up," says Richard T. Feller, clerk of the works, who oversees the massive project. With its ribbed vaults, pointed arches, flying buttresses and large windows, the cathedral has been "a very, very complex problem" to build, says Feller, a civil engineer who has spent more than 30 years at work here.

The Episcopal cathedral is also known as the National Cathedral and the Cathedral Church of St. Peter and Paul. Modeled in the English gothic style of the 14th century, the edifice dominates the skyline here atop Mount St. Alban. Each year, 300,000 visitors pass through the cathedrals doors, in addition to its 250,000 worshippers. Work on the interior is complete except for some finishing touches.

"It's our national cathedral," says Annie Lou White of Pasadena, Calif., a member of the 14,000-member National Cathedral Association's board of trustees, "and it's a symbol to all of us — not just in the Episcopal church, but to the whole country."

Its symbolism is matched by its sheer physical mass. At an estimated 150,000 tons in weight and 518 feet in length, the cathedral ranks behind only five others in the world in overall size: St. Peters in Rome, the Seville cathedral, St. John's in New York, and the edifices in Liverpool and Milan.

Over the years, a key ingredient in the progress of this elaborately carved limestone cathedral has been the corps of artists, sculptors and skilled craftsmen who spent years at work here. It is a group that is steadily vanishing. The original stone carvers and masons have all retired or died.

But, beyond the myriad physical obstacles presented by such a project, which Feller says is based on precision and perfection, is the periodic problem of money.

Work on the cathedral was interrupted during both world wars and halted in the late 1970s for several years after a construction debt of millions of dollars had accumulated. Today, Feller says, "we pay as we go."

Perry estimates that $50 million has been spent on the cathedral, a figure that translates into $150 million to $200 million in current dollars. Although that sum would make a comparable undertaking virtually impossible today, financing the cathedral has nevertheless been no small task for an organization that depends on public donations and contributions to continue construction.

Perry estimates that the cathedral has $9 million in remaining construction costs and is launching a campaign to raise the last $4.5 million needed to complete the task.

Most of the money is needed for the twin west towers of St. Peter and St. Paul over the main entrance. About a third of both towers, which are being built in tandem to cut costs, has been completed.

While the blocks of buff limestone still are set by masons, there are some modern aids that ancient engineers would have envied. In fact, the tall Linden crane — now a nationwide fixture — for building skyscrapers — was first brought to America for construction on the cathedral.

All of the limestone comes from Indiana quarries that have supplied the stone since construction began. The cathedral's planners wanted to be sure that there would be ample supplies of the buff stone for the duration of the building — preventing such eyesores as the different colored stones visible on the Washington Monument.

And among the array of flowers, seashells, angels and animals that adorn this majestic edifice, all examples of the elaborate gothic artistry that has withstood centuries of architectural alteration, stand a number of surprises: A small, limestone likeness of Darth Vader, the Hollywood Villain of "Star Wars" fame, is awaiting its turn to be set by masons.

Darth Vader was carved after 13-year-old Chris Rader of Kearney, Neb., won third place in a "draw a grotesque" contest in which 1,400 children from 16 countries participated. And, in tribute to a documentary film about the cathedral's stone carvers that won a 1985 Academy Award, one of the figures will hold an Oscar.

Retiree's age shocks friends

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Clara Mari had a secret that only her children knew: she was 16 years beyond retirement age when she stopped working on Oct. 1.

When Mrs. Mari retired this month after 21 years as a sales clerk in the children's department of a downtown store she was 81, according to her driver's license, not 65 as her co-workers thought.

"It always bothered me that they didn't know at work," said Mrs. Mari. "I'm not proud of it, but I had to lie about my age to get the job in the first place."

Mrs. Mari's co-workers at the Sample Inc. store thought so much of her they held a retirement party on Oct. 5.

"She was a real good worker, a very good worker and she doesn't look her age," assistant supervisor Mary Newton said Tuesday. "I guess she just decided it was time to retire."

"I needed to work, to keep my home and not be a burden to my children," she said.

Hey retailers!

Is the high cost of advertising getting you down?
Lower your costs and lift your spirits going co-op in The Times-News.
When you buy from a manufacturer or distributor, chances are they set aside co-op dollars for you to feature their products in your ads. Or for you to be listed in their co-op campaigns. That's where we come in.
The Times-News will research your manufacturers to find out what kinds of co-op programs they offer. (In some cases, a manufacturer will pay as much as 100% of your co-op ad!) We'll also show you how to recover these dollars and put them to good use in The Times-News. We'll provide free copy and layouts. Assist with billings and reimbursements. Even plan your Times-News campaign.
In short, we know that co-op advertising can be time-consuming for retailers caught up in the daily operation of a business. So we do a lot of the legwork for you. For free.
To see how co-op can work for you, contact your advertising representative or Kari Chadwell at 733-0931.

High mortality of pups result of being chilled

Nearly one-third of all puppies die within the first three weeks of life, according to an article in the October issue of Sports Afield, and most often the cause of death is not disease but simply puppies getting chilled.

Infant puppies undergo a rapid temperature decline at birth, leaving the 103 degree internal warmth of the mother for a world of 80 degree temperatures. Immediately, puppy core temperature drops to about 96 degrees, then gradually rises to about 100 degrees after seven days. Puppies do not have the ability to shiver to raise body temperature.

If pups are not kept in a sufficiently warm environment during the first week of life, they can suffer from hypothermia. In this state they lose control of the ability to nurse. Once they can no longer nurse, they soon stiffen and die.

Sometimes the mother will cull newborns and push a pup or two out of the pile, particularly in large litters. She probably recognizes that those pups have become too cold and wants to avoid having their cool bodies chill the rest of the litter.

Dog owners can prevent many puppy deaths. Start with a roomy whelping box with sides high enough to eliminate floor draft. The box should be in a room where air temperature can be maintained no lower than 80 degrees Fahrenheit.

Those are the basic requirements, but there is need for supplemental heating.

To eliminate chilling, the floor temperature beneath the pups should be kept no lower than 85 degrees for the first few days. One solution is an electric heating pad turned low and covered with a towel. Unfortunately, pads have hot and cold spots. Weaker pups who get pushed off the pad may not be able to get back on.

Some people use heating lamps hung above the whelping box. This is an imperfect system because the mother may find the lamps too hot and move away from them, drawing the litter with her.

Excessive heat is as dangerous as chilling to newborn pups. Newborns exposed to temperatures above 103 degrees for one to three hours will die of dehydration in a matter of hours.

Heat lamps placed too close above the litter are often the cause of "unexplainable" infant puppy deaths. Heating pads may have hot spots that can overheat puppies, causing them to dehydrate and die.

A big breakthrough is an electric whelping nest with an adjustable thermostat to keep floor temperature precisely at recommended levels — ambient temperatures should be maintained at 85 to 90 degrees for the first five days of a puppy's life.

The nest consists of a shallow metal pan recessed in the floor of the whelping box. A grid system under the pan spreads heat evenly. A temperature control unit is mounted outside the box.

The whelping nest has been tested at schools of veterinary medicine and proved to provide accurate control over floor temperatures for newborn pups.

Valley life

Solid education is built on attendance

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: It might interest you to know that a letter from your column was used as the basis for a feature story about an outstanding student at Roosevelt-Wilson High School in Nutter Fort, W.Va.

Buffie Blackshire, 16, excelled in several fields of endeavor both in and outside of school and had a perfect attendance record since kindergarten. The principal of that high school thought that letter was so effective that he included it in a newsletter he sent to parents. I have enclosed that letter, hoping you will run it again.

— MARGARET WILSON

DEAR MARGARET: Here's the letter:

DEAR ABBY: Now that school has resumed, as a high school teacher, may I make a few suggestions that would greatly improve our nation's educational system and cost the taxpayers nothing?

A message to students: Stop skipping school because you don't want to face a challenging day. Accept those challenges and do your best. Your whole life will be filled with challenges, so learn to deal with them now — one day at a time.

A message to parents: Stop letting your children skip school to go shopping, to go hunting, to sleep in, to go on a family vacation, to nurse a minor ache, or whatever. It's your responsibility to see that your children get eight hours of sleep each night, eat nutritious meals (especially breakfast) and get to school on time.

A message to business people: Stop hiring students to work during school hours. And please stop hiring teen-age students to work after 8 p.m. on evenings before a school day. They need time to study and get a good night's sleep for school the next day.

A message to doctors, dentists, counselors and social workers: Please stop pulling students out of classes for non-emergencies to accommodate your schedules. Most students are dismissed at 2:45 p.m., so please give them late-afternoon appointments. Their education is as important to them as the schedules of adult patients and clients are to professionals.

Abby, recent studies show that we are a nation at risk. In the last 10 to 15 years, the quality of our education has deteriorated dramatically. An appalling number of our high school students are certified illiterates, and absenteeism is one of the main causes.

— SMALL-TOWN TEACHER

DEAR TEACHER: Bravo! Well stated. Students, parents, business people, doctors, dentists, counselors and social workers, please take note and make school attendance a top priority.

DEAR ABBY: Don't people know what a doorbell is anymore? I live in a small town in Massachusetts where no one seems to use a doorbell — people just sit in the car and lay on the horn to beckon someone from his house.

This inconsiderate practice knows no limits: Horns can be heard at 6 a.m. or 2 a.m. I don't live on a busy street — it's a neighborhood where houses are close together.

The man across the street is picked up precisely at 6:40 a.m. every workday. I know his ride is coming at that time. Why doesn't he?

What is wrong with people these days? How did such ignorant and inconsiderate behavior come to be acceptable?

— FED UP IN EVERETT

DEAR FED UP: Ignorant and inconsiderate behavior has never come to be acceptable, but if it persists unchallenged, it will continue. You may have to get out of a warm bed and give the picker-upper what-for at 6:40 a.m. a time or two, but I'll wager the honking will stop. Try it.
